5 Scholarship Offers Made

Five national 4-H programs important in training rural boys and girls in farm and home projects are being continued in 1953, the state club office has announced.

The programs and donors are: Canning, Kerr; clothing, Spool Cotton; food preparation, Kelvinator; garden, Allis-Chalmers; and home improvement, Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

Based on latest enrollment figures, it is estimated that more than 1 1/2 million club members—both boys and girls—throughout the nation will participate this year in the five programs, in which they will make or remodel 2 1/2 million garments, plan and serve 13 million meals, can and freeze 8 1/2 million quarts and 2 million pounds of foods, and make 430,000 articles to improve 115,000 rooms in their homes.

Incentives for top records of achievement in each of these programs are honor medals, trips to the annual 4-H club congress in Chicago, and $300 college scholarships to county, state and national winners, respectively.

Labor Supply Above Normal

Lebanon — Employers of east Linn county report the supply of available labor much greater this year during January and early February than in several years past, reports Charles B. Wilson, manager of the Lebanon branch of the state employment office.

Logging and lumbering, the area's main industries, report an unusually large number of workers seeking work daily at their operations. There has been little to offer them as turnover is at its lowest point for the year and employers are still calling back former employees previously laid off.

Estimated unemployment on Jan. 31 was about 200 less than for the month before, favorable weather having given rise to continuous operations and more full employment.

Even though unemployment compensation claims were less than a year ago, total unemployment was considered more because of the available labor supply in the area, part of which has migrated to this section in the past several months from adjoining areas of Oregon, and from Washington.

Discover Bones of Prehistoric Man

Tokyo (AP)—Chinese communist archaeologists have discovered three skulls and numerous bone fragments of the prehistoric Peking man, Radio Peiping said today.

The broadcast said archaeologists also found a "comparatively well-preserved" skull of a young woman of the new stone age.
