Other projects now being carried on by volunteer aides are taking patients for rides, baking cookies, sewing, and giving parties on the wards, with coffee and cookies for the patients.

Ask Interim

"Because of its inadequate retirement benefits, we believe that future sessions of the legislature would be plagued by employe groups until this retirement problem is solved by the enactment of a supplemental plan."

The actuary committee was composed of R. H. Niles, of Portland, actuary for the Standard Insurance company; A. W. England, San Francisco, representing the firm of Coates, Herfurth & England; R. G. Green, actuary for the state industrial accident commission; Dr. R. B. Saunders, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Oregon and M. M. Manchester, executive secretary of the public employes retirement board.

The actuary told the ways and means a committee that months of study are required before "any intelligent action" can be taken to combine the state and federal plans as voted in the state of Virginia.

The report contended that the Oregon public employes retirement system "has not kept pace with the public systems of the surrounding states or private business."

In recommending an interim committee, the actuary suggested that the proposed review board be composed of representatives of employe groups, the state administration and private industry.

The committee warned that should it be decided to discard the present retirement system in favor of federal social security, "Oregon would completely give up its control over the retirement system . . . and would be committed to a program in which the contributions, benefits and administration would be completely controlled by the federal government."

The committee also voiced other objections including the fact that the federal plan may be subject to future changes, or complete revision, that 44 per cent of the present membership in the state system are women, and would suffer under the change and many "career employees" with long years of public service would receive considerably reduced benefits.

Adoption of the actuary's report means that there will be no legislative change in the retirement system this session, but instead, any such changes will await the report and suggested legislation that will be produced for the 1955 legislature.

Outcome of Accident Brings Damage Suit

Suit seeking judgment of $15,000 against Kathryn Gunnell was filed Friday in circuit court by Charles Sievers as administrator of the estate of Helen Sievers.

The complaint states that Helen Sievers died January 5, 1952, as the result of injuries received as the result of an automobile accident December 31, 1952, near the intersection of Pine street and Cherry avenue.

The plaintiff contends the defendant neglected to stop her automobile at the intersection and that she was driving at an excessive rate of speed under the circumstances and conditions that prevailed.

Mrs. Sievers was a passenger in one of the automobiles.

Uniform Wage Scale Agreement Made

Portland (AP)—A uniform scale has been agreed to by employers for carpenters, pildrivers and millwrights in Oregon and Southwest Washington.

A joint statement by the union and employer representatives announced the scales for carpenters at $2.55 an hour, for pile drivers $2.65 and for millwrights $2.80.

The agreement wound up negotiations for some 12,000 workers, started October 1.

Bank's Error Brings Suit To Recover

Bend (AP)—It was all a mistake and the Bend branch of the United States National Bank wants its $1,800.46 back.

So it filed suit in Circuit Court against George Simmons, who really only had $3.40 coming.

That was the gist of the complaint filed by the bank. It said that Simmons, a millwright, entered the bank on February 6 to close his account. He had $3.40 in the bank and a teller drew a check but by mistake made it for $1,803.86.

Simmons swiftly cashed the check and then wouldn't give back the money, the complaint said.

The bank now wants not only $1,800.46 but interest and court costs, too.

Trees Planted

Mrs. Brandt urged the children to be policemen of trees in Salem to see that they were kept well and unharmed to keep Salem a beautiful city. She introduced Ralph Weddle, Southern Pacific employee who will have the job of caring for the park.

Lyons told the group that the forestry department fully supported such plantings both in the city and in the rural areas. The department will furnish trees to be planted on public lands for any group that wishes to do so, he said.

First tree planted after the ceremony was a 14-foot Douglas fir that the sponsoring business houses plan to light every year as a community Christmas tree.

Jim Hathaway of Service Center company supervised the planting of the evergreen and also three Garry oaks and three sweet gums. He was assisted by SP employees.

Four more trees are planned for the park to complete the planting, Mrs. Brandt said. They will be two Japanese cherry trees and two conifer or holly trees. They will be planted when funds are available to finance them, she said.

Old and New Bosses of CJ Honored by Employees

By MARIAN LOWRY FISCHER

Capital Journal employees, some 90 strong, gathered at the American Legion club Thursday night for a dinner to honor three men who are principals in the change of ownership effective February 1.

The dinner was arranged: To pay tribute to George Putnam, editor and publisher of the paper for the past 34 years and now editor emeritus.

To say farewell to Robert Letts Jones, assistant publisher for the past five years and now to leave the paper.

To welcome Bernard Mainwaring, who became the new publisher and editor on February 1.

With Mr. Mainwaring was Mrs. Mainwaring, who has been in Salem the past two days. Mrs. Mainwaring left Friday for Nampa, Idaho, their former home. She and the son and daughter will remain there until school is out when they will move to Salem.

George Tookey, foreman in the paper's stereotyping department, was toastmaster for the short program. Tookey expressed the staff's high esteem for Mr. Putnam and the appreciation of the group for the fact Mr. Putnam continues at the paper as editor emeritus and in advisory capacity. Tookey expressed the regret of associates and employes that Mr. Jones is leaving. In behalf of the employes Mrs. Betty Lawrence presented Mr. Jones with an engraved leather combination brief case and overnight bag.

In introducing Mr. Mainwaring, Tookey said the Capital Journal staff is proud to have a man with the new owner's reputation in the newspaper realm take over as "the boss."

In response, Mr. Putnam expressed his appreciation and paid tribute to Mr. Jones and Mr. Mainwaring, then went on to read some of the letters received from around the state from friends wishing him continued good health and "time to rest." Some of the notes came from men whom Mr. Putnam had criticized in vigorous editorials but they wanted him to know they respect him as a leading Oregon editor and man of conviction.

Mr. Mainwaring pledged the group to work to maintain the fine reputation the paper, the state's fourth largest daily, enjoys, and called on the staff members to cooperate with him in maintaining that reputation.

The dinner was an informal buffet one and in charge of arrangements were George R. Duke, press superintendent, Mrs. Betty Lawrence from the business office, and Margaret Magee, from the news room.

Doug McKay Subject of Post Feature

Oregon's contribution to the cabinet of President Eisenhower, Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay, was introduced Monday to readers of the Washington Post in a full page spread having a picture and a brief biographical sketch of McKay.

The feature, sponsored by the Hecht company of Washington, D.C. is the eighth of a series introducing the new cabinet officials.

A nine by six and a half picture of the new secretary of interior in the upper right hand corner of the page and in the upper left-hand corner is the seal of the department of interior and bureau of mines.

Beneath "Welcome to Washington Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay" and following is the biographical information, which also includes a list of projects in which the Oregonian has been interested that provide him with a background for his present assignment.

Volunteers undergoing the test include: William J. Copes, seaman, 20, son of Mrs. Anna M. Sooter of Maple Falls, Wash.

The navy said in a statement that the crewmen have games, hobbies, phonograph records and movies—but there is no mail from home, no telephone connections for calls to friends or family, no radio or television entertainment.

"They will not see daylight, bearing emergencies, during the two months the operation is now scheduled to run," said the Navy.

"That's the way it will be when the Nautilus and the Sea Wolf, the two nuclear-powered submarines now being built and the world's first such craft, put out to sea. Their engines will enable them to stay submerged almost indefinitely.

Now, says the Navy, it wants to know "how the human factor will limit operation" of nuclear submarines.

Negotiations and meetings that led up to the attempt on the part of the owners of the T. A. Livesley building to secure an injunction against Local 160 of the Salem Building Maintenance workers union which would prevent picketing of the building were aired before Judge Rex Kimmel in Marion county circuit court Friday.

R. M. Livesley, president of the company owning the building that is involved, said that he left the matter of continuing a contract with the union strictly up to the building employees. When they decided to reject a contract they formed the Livesley Building Maintenance association and a contract was signed.

The defense, making numerous objections to the plaintiff's questions, made an effort to prove that the maintenance association was a "pseudo" organization, agreed upon for the purpose of fighting the union.

Numerous employees of the Livesley building as well as union representatives attended the hearing. It is anticipated Judge Kimmel will take the case under advisement at the conclusion of testimony.

Holman Back in Hospital

Tom Holman, an employe of the Salem plant of Sick's Brewery, was returned to the Salem Memorial hospital Friday for further treatment. He underwent surgery a week ago and recovered sufficiently to permit his return to his home. However, it was determined that additional treatment was necessary.
