Bulls Sell Higher Than Year Ago, Heifers Lower

By CLAUDE STEUSLOFF
Bulls sold higher than last year while heifers were slightly lower in rather brisk bidding at the third annual Polled Hereford association sale at the State fairgrounds yesterday. Thirty bulls averaged $830 each, compared to $850 bull average last year. The average price for heifers was $745, last year they averaged $813.
Top prices on both bulls and heifers were also a bit under the 1952 sale figures. Swale Meadows Farms at Centerville, Wash., paid $2500 for the reserve champion bull to top the sale in the bull department. The top selling female at $1250 went to H. L. Sanborn, at Meridian, Calif. Last year the top bull sold for $3100 with the top heifer bringing $1525.
Top consignment of the sale was three unusually well grown 2 year old bulls bred by Floyd Worden of Heppner. They were sired by Victory Domino "21." It was the second birthday for the member of the trio who topped the sale at $2500 and he weighed 1875 pounds. His two weeks younger half brother tipped the beam at 1840 pounds and brought $2475, second high price of the sale. A. E. Luther and Marcus Spencer of Gooding, Idaho, were his purchasers. The smallest of the three bulls went to Earl Forest of Redmond at $1260.
The bull who was made champion in judging held Sunday went for $1510 to Clarence N. Hunt & Sons of Maupin. Hunts were the largest buyers of bulls, ending up with seven animals for which they paid $5810.
Bob Jones, long-time beef producer of Clifton, was largest individual buyer of females. He had the high bid on four at prices from $750 to $700.
Reed Taylor of Alico, who sold the top females at $1250 to H. L. Sanborn of Meridian, Calif., said she really was going back home. Taylor bought the heifer's sire from Sanborn at his dispersal sale. Sanborn is now going into business again and is trying to pick up some of his old bloodlines.
Bob Sears of Salem paid $700 for a tidy little 2-year-old heifer consigned by Taylor. She placed fourth in the judging.
H. C. Toelle of Salem laid in a foundation herd of one bull and two heifers. The bull for which he paid $590 was F. R. H. Larry's Pride, consigned by Frank Hill of Weiser, Idaho. Price of his 2 year old stablemate was $760, with a senior yearling at $610.
Dave Brown of 1805 Market street, Salem, paid $700 for the 2 year old herd sire consigned by Minkoff Hereford Ranch, Clatskanie.
Seven bulls and three heifers sold for $1,000 or more each. Average price on 13 two year old bulls was $1129.62; the 14 senior yearlings averaged $741 and three junior yearlings averaged $506.67. Heifer 2 year olds averaged $713.57 on 14 animals; $802 on five senior yearlings and $875 for two junior yearlings.

Baby's Throat Cut By Mother

Sacramento, Calif. (AP)—A frantic woman physician failed Monday night to save her infant daughter's life after cutting the baby's throat in an attempt to let her breathe.
Deputy Coroner Russ Hershey said Dr. Eleanor Strathman, 27, a McClellan air force base physician, told him this story:
Her 7-months-old daughter Jane Marie began choking after the doctor gave her a baby aspirin.
After turning the baby upside down failed to dislodge the pill, she stuck her finger down the baby's throat. As a last resort, she took a paring knife and attempted to make an incision beneath the baby's adam's apple so the baby could take in air below the aspirin.

State Game Commission Opposes Grazing Land Act

Through its chairman, Kenneth Druman of Medford, the Oregon Game commission has announced its opposition to the proposed "Uniform Federal Grazing Land Tenancy Act."
The act, sponsored by the stockmen's grazing committee representing western livestock interests, is aimed at a revision of federal grazing controls on public lands.
In effect, the game commission believes the proposed grazing act would extend the principle of special interest legislation to the national forest lands. On some public lands, for example, grazing is given recognition as the primary use.
Another of the commission's principal objections is to a section of the grazing land tenancy act that would change grazing on the national forests from a permit status to a vested right.
The commission also feels all individual limitations of livestock numbers could be lifted, and protective measures established by the U. S. forest service to safeguard watersheds from overgrazing and erosion would be weakened under the proposed act.
Although the act is worded to the effect that watershed protection, water rights, hunting and fishing, and other uses on national forests are not to be infringed upon, the commission foresees a danger to these uses because overgrazing could destroy watershed values by removing the forage and natural cover required by wildlife and seriously effect stream flows that are vital for maintenance of fish and the public welfare.
In taking its stand against the proposed "Uniform Federal Grazing Land Act," the commission also pictured the act as an opening wedge that could eventually destroy present laws and policies governing national forests whereby watershed values, timber, recreation, wildlife, and grazing are all given equitable consideration.
