

Aerial Photographing of Burn Forestry Project

Aerial photographing of the Tillamook Burn and adjacent area, including a total of 514,000 acres is a project to be undertaken this year by the state board of forestry.

Bids are now being asked on the project with the date for the sealed bids to be in the hands of the state forester, acting for the state board of forestry, to be opened March 20 at 2 p.m.

The photographs, which are to be made on a scale of one inch for every 1,000 feet on the ground, will be used for reforestation and rehabilitation programs, including the seeding and planting, and building of fire breaks in the big Burn.

Maps will be made from the photographs and both will be used over an extended period of time, with changes made from time to time to keep it up to date. It is estimated that the use of the photographs will cut down on the field work by one-third.

The actual photographing of the Tillamook Burn will be done during the months of May and June with the work to be under the supervision of Rudy Kallander of the rehabilitation section.

Pictures taken will be of two types: the panoramic pictures, (the conventional film) and infrared pictures to be used in photo interpretation.

The standard panoramic pictures will be used mainly for location of fire breaks, logging roads, counting of snags, location of snag areas that can be salvaged by logging companies and the determining of boundary surveys.

Pictures taken with infrared film turn the green in trees white and can be used by the department for determining the number of conifers and broad-leaved species of trees now growing in the Burn. The scale photos will permit an accurate measurement of young firs as small as six feet high.

Mt. Angel—At the meeting of the Mount Angel City Council Monday evening, council members voted to accept the resignation of Joseph Hassler as water commissioner, which he presented to the council.

Merle Grace, city police commissioner, reported on city parking. Since Main street is now a regular Oregon state highway, it is necessary that the new rules in parking be observed. Cars must be parked within 18 inches of the curb, and violations will be punishable by fine.

Grace stated that the parking strip on the southeast corner of Main and Charles streets was only large enough to park one car, and should be marked as such.

Joseph Wagner told of the tree planting program which is nearly completed for this season, with 107 trees planted and 15 more trees to be planted at a cost of $74.
