Salem Pilots Have New Plane

Salem Pilots' association members are now in the air—and that is literally, for they have recently purchased a Cessna 120, which daily is taken up by some member.

The association, organized here in September of last year to promote aviation in Salem and give pilots not having a plane of their own an opportunity to fly, after purchasing the plane gave it a complete major, which means an overhauling.

Now having a membership of 14 pilots, the association expects to increase its membership and as it does so will make plans for purchasing still another plane.

The second plane will probably be larger than the Cessna, which carries a pilot and a passenger. The fee for use of the plane now is three and a half dollars an hour.

Heading the association as president is Bob Armprist.

and the government called for continuation of such policies as strengthening the nation's armed forces, increased vigilance at home and tighter bonds with communists abroad.

At this stage there is no prospect of any change in the policies Stalin pursued.

Friday afternoon a motor hearse left the St. Spassky gate in the Kremlin. While thousands assembled on Red Square to see it, the hearse moved slowly from the Kremlin to the Hall of Columns, bearing Stalin's coffin.

Immense heaps of flowers and wreaths surrounded it. Russians began filing past to gaze for the last time at the man who led them to victory over Nazi Germany. Thousands were in line when the doors opened.

The processions for those wishing to say "Svidaniya" (good-bye) will continue day and night until the funeral, a commission headed by Nikita S. Khrushchev now is working on funeral plans. No date has been announced for the final services nor has there been any word where Stalin is to be buried.

The Hall of Columns is only a few hundred yards from the great mausoleum in Red Square where V. I. Lenin, Stalin's predecessor and the father of Russian communism, lies embalmed in a glass coffin.

The Hall of Columns is in the House of Trade Unions on Red Square. Built in the empire style under the czars in 1874, it features 28 white Corinthian-style columns. It can accommodate at least 2,000 persons and often has been used for state functions, conferences and concerts.

Moscow was cold, windy and unpleasant Friday, but life went on about as usual. Hundreds still were filling into churches to place candles before icons. There were tears in the eyes of some, some had grim, set faces, many crossed themselves repeatedly.

West Europe

The announcement promised a continued buildup of the Soviet Army, Navy and intelligence services to deal a decisive rebuff to any aggressor. It added pledges of friendship with China and other Communist satellites and with workers of capitalist and colonial countries.

Some Western observers saw signs of a possible crack in Communist unity in Moscow in the announcement's call for an all-out "struggle against internal and external foes." But many feared any such disunity might heighten the danger of war rather than lessen it.

The news two days ago of a Soviet leader's grave illness gave Europeans ample time to ponder its implications, and the announcement that the Russian leader was dead came as no great shock.

Interim Group

Six members of the committee would be appointed by the president of the senate, one from each congressional district and two from the state-at-large.

The five remaining members of the committee would be appointed by the governor, one to be selected from each congressional district and the fifth from the state-at-large.

The committee, under the terms of the proposed bill, would be charged with the duty of studying the present Oregon constitution and make a complete report to the 48th legislative assembly.

Drafts Provided

Drafts of proposed constitutional amendments or in the event the committee decides to present a new constitution, a complete draft of such proposed constitution, must be ready for consideration of the legislature.

Rep. Baum declared Friday that he was of the belief that the committee of the six suggested in the proposed bill could do a workmanship like job at very little cost to the state.

Another advantage of the plan he and Rep. Hill are proposing is that only one submission of the issue to the people would be necessary, while under the constitutional convention bills, the people would be first called upon to authorize the calling of the convention and later vote on adoption of the draft of the constitution adopted by the convention.

Substantial Saving—Gravel used to backfill the approach to the old Center bridge has been removed and replaced as backfill for the new approach on the reconstructed and re-aligned structure. Highway engineers estimate that 1700 yards of gravel was salvaged. Top view shows a power shovel removing the last of the old fill. Lower picture shows backfill placed in new approach. About 100 additional yards will be needed to reach grade.

Saltonstall said he hopes to have Van Fleet present then but that the general has an engagement with the house armed services committee and it is a question whether he can appear.

"We want to find out why there has been a shortage in certain kinds of ammunition and what can be done to end it," Saltonstall said.

He said Van Fleet testified Friday that even with existing forces and ammunition in Korea "we could apply more pressure on the enemy."
