Aurora Church Has New Pulpit

Aurora—Aurora's Presbyterian church has a new mahogany pulpit built by Floyd Smith and in use March first for the first time, the pastor, Rev. Robert C. Hampel said. An addition of a nearly new piano has been acquired by the church and the one formerly in use has been moved to the social hall and Sunday school. New velvet draperies for the sanctuary were installed last fall.

The church's building program has progressed to the point that the new basement with 1800 square feet of floor space is in use. Twenty-five men have been working as volunteers to complete the basement which affords several Sunday school class rooms as well as space for social activities.

The Aurora Presbyterian and Butteville Congregational churches are participating again this year in the "One Great Hour of Sharing," the Lenten program of sacrificial offering will be dedicated Sunday morning, March 8, to help the homeless, distressed, and hungry from Korea to flood-devastated Holland.

Next Sunday, Rev. Hampel, will continue the Lenten series of sermons, speaking on the theme: "Lost and Found."
