Adlai Leaves On Tokyo Plane

Honolulu, O.H.—Adlai Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential candidate, left for Tokyo today after a two-day visit to Hawaii that left him "exhausted." Stevenson shouted goodbye and blew a kiss to a crowd of 200 as he boarded a Pan-American Strato clipper. He was so buried in fragrant carnation, orchid and feather leis that his face was barely visible.

"I am exhausted but it has been truly impressive," he confided to a friend at the airport.

During his visit, Stevenson went on a whirlwind round of cocktail parties, banquets and meetings with Hawaii Democrats and well wishers. He learned to eat poi with his fingers and frankly admitted it wasn't his dish. He also went on an outrigger canoe ride and swam at Waikiki.

Fifteen-hundred persons from both parties turned out at a Luau Saturday night at which Stevenson said it was important for Hawaii to help preserve democracy's ideals as the center of world leadership moves westward.

Stevenson is on a round the world tour. He arrives in Tokyo tomorrow.

The appeal is from a decision of Circuit Judge George Duncan on a writ of review filed by the power company. One of our loyal, efficient policywriters left her typewriter, desk, carbon paper and encloses a few months ago to join the ranks of American mothers. We are firm believers in the institution known as the American family and we wished her well. Then, for reasons best known only to expectant mothers, and in preparation for the event, most of the frills that were gradually acquired turned out to be various shades of pink rather than blue. (So we are told!) So what happened? Twins—and boys at that! So, Margaret O. from Silverton, you have our very best wishes and thanks for reminding us that we hadn't told our friends that —we also handle Twin Insurance and the cost is not unreasonable. Many people probably don't even know it is available but we can provide the insurance if you will furnish the twins!
