Denial of Pay

Rep. Mark Hatfield of Marion county said he thought the action of the big money committee was an "injustice" to the employees in the lower brackets. "I certainly don't like it," he said, "and feel that the entire issue should be re-examined."

Other members of the Marion county house delegation, Reps. W. W. Chadwick, Robert Elstrom and Lee Ohmart, joined Hatfield in the protest.

Rep. Chadwick said that he favored the increases for the administrative officials but by the same token he felt that employees in the lower brackets should also receive pay increases, particularly those who were by-passed in the last general increase.

Forest V. Stewart, executive secretary of the State Employees association, produced wage statistics in direct contravention of those used by members of the sub-committee on salaries before the Ways and Means committee Wednesday.

"The recent salary survey of the state civil service commission and those of the Oregon association of Engineering Employees as well as data collected by the Employees association, are in agreement in showing that Oregon's state salaries and wages are generally lower than those paid for similar jobs in the state of Washington, California, city of Portland, private industry, federal agencies," Stewart said.

"The results of these impartial surveys are available to those who search for reliable facts." Stewart said that a survey conducted by the United States bureau of labor in September, of salaries paid by non-manufacturing agencies in Oregon showed that private industry paid an average of $193 a month for junior clerk, the state of Washington paid $215 for the same position, and Oregon paid $181.

"The Employees association believes that one gets what one pays for in the competitive labor market," Stewart continued. "The OSEA has persistently maintained that state services to the public will improve and can be furnished at reasonable cost only when the state employees are efficient, conscientious, loyal and steady."

"The OSEA has therefore asked Oregon to pay its employees the prevailing rates of pay for services rendered," he added.

Rep. Gust Anderson, who is a recognized Oregon labor leader, declared that he would support the increases for the officials in the higher brackets, but he, too, felt that those in the lower brackets should be given equal consideration.

The rebuke, which appeared to be spreading through the house, was the sharpest given to a committee during the present session.

Walker Defends Action
Sen. Dean Walker, chairman of the ways and means committee, defended its action and commented:

"I wish Mr. Stewart had waited to examine the full report of the sub-committee on salaries. 'I think he would find there, the full explanation.'"

But Sen. Robert Holmes, the lone member of the committee who voted against the report, said that while he "made no fuss" at the committee meeting, he registered his negative vote, so that he could attack the report on the senate floor.

"I'll be prepared to make the presentation, believe you me," he said.

Robber Caught

All bank employees were forced to lie on the floor of the lobby in a semi-circle except Elaine Annen, who was handed a paper bag and forced to place $18,000 in it, K ruse reported. Sulisky took the bag, warned the employees to remain on the floor for five minutes, and walked out nonchalantly.

Kruse stepped from the bank as soon as the bandit drove away, spread the alarm and then pursued him but lost the trail a few miles out of town.

As state police, sheriff's deputies and FBI agents arrived at the scene, Peter Gores, service station operator, supplied the clue that led to Sulisky's arrest. He gave the officers the license number of the car which he had obtained several days previously when the youth stopped at his service station to inquire about used tires.

At the time, Gores said, he noticed that the rear license plate was missing from the car. He ordered his assistant to take down the front license plate number while he continued his conversation with the youth.

Tuesday, Gores said, he noticed the same car again with both license plates missing and when told of the robbery reported the incident to police at once.

Sulisky told police that he left eastern Oregon 10 days ago and had been around Mt. Angel several days "casing" the bank. He said he drove a twisting course away from the scene until pursuit was lost, and then replaced the license plates and headed leisurely for the North Santiam highway.

For the last two years Sulisky had lived with his mother at Pendleton. Previously he lived at Hermiston while attending school and at Ordinance with his father.

The investigation was directed by Sheriff Denver Young, Capt. R. G. Howard of the state police, and George C. Burton, special agent in charge of the Portland office of the FBI J. H. Fournier, manager of the bank.

Describe Attack by Communist MIGs—Lt. Donald C. Smith, (left) and Lt. Warren G. Brown, the two U. S. Air Force pilots who were fired at by two communist MIG-15 jets over Germany's U. S. zone, use plane models to illustrate the attack for interviewers at Wiesbaden. Lt. Brown, of Henderson, Colo., parachuted to safety when his damaged plane went out of control and crashed. Lt. Smith, from Marysville, O., landed at his base undamaged. Incident happened near the Czech frontier during a routine patrol. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Frankfurt.)

supplied the police with an accurate description of the bandit. State police turned Sulisky over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and he is being held at the city jail in custody of Sheriff Denver Young until he is taken to Portland where he will be arraigned later.

is that these operators harvest timber on federal lands and are required to pay into fire protection fund set up by the government.

The proposed bill, which has the general approval of the lumber industry, the state board of forestry and the committee members themselves, provides for a board of five to administer the fund.

This board will include three members of the present forestry board, one representing the West Coast Lumbermen's association, the Western Pine association and the Oregon forest fire association. The dean of the school of forestry at Oregon State college would be the fourth member while the fifth would be named by the governor to represent the public at large.

This committee would appoint an administrator, whose duty would be to co-ordinate activities all state agencies in equalization of forest products.

Rep. Loren Stewart, chairman of the house committee said that the tax provided in the bill is designed to raise a ceiling of $750,000 for emergency fire protection and $400,000 for the research work. This money would be in addition to budgeted funds administered by the state board of forestry.

West German police said the jets apparently also fired at the British airmen when they were parachuting to earth. One recovered parachute had a cannon shell hole.

An air force sergeant, identified as the bomber's navigator, was picked up by a West German civilian car and driven to a hospital but died en route. He had a bullet wound in the shoulder and his neck had been broken in the parachute drop.

Injured Airman Survives
Another injured airman, the pilot, was brought alive to a hospital, where British military doctors refused further details. Only the Soviet air force has fighters stationed in East Germany.

The fighters flew off unscathed after circling the smoking wreckage which marked their kill on the east bank of the Elbe, just across the river from the West German village of Barboerde.

German border crossers said East German people's police immediately cordoned off the debris. Other wreckage appeared in the British zone or in the area beneath the air corridor between Hamburg and Berlin.

Too Slow for Defense
The old wartime Lincoln was too slow to defend itself against the jet attack. The U.S. Thunderjet destroyed last Tuesday was also easy prey for super-fast Mig-15s. That pilot, Lt. Warren G. Brown, never had time to fire back after he was attacked without warning.

The Lincoln carried a crew of at least five. German civil administration will in the future allow the performance of necessary services at greater savings than the present operations would permit.

Eisenhower expressed the conviction that all the agencies now in FSA—including the social security system, Public Health Service, Food and Drug Administration and Office of Education—should continue within the framework of a single department.

Benefits Expected
Eisenhower said in his message to Congress that the reorganization plan would not result in immediate savings to the taxpayer but added:

Critical Shortages
The resolution, approved unanimously, took official note of Van Fleet's testimony that: 1. "Serious and at times critical shortages" existed throughout his tour of duty as Eighth Army commander.

2. Van Fleet "reported almost daily the existence of such shortages." 3. "The shortages of ammunition substantially restricted the action of our troops and endangered our defense lines."

4. The situation was "improving" when Van Fleet left Korea but "shortages still existed."
