Bangs Vaccinations Increase 60 Per Cent

Vaccination against Bangs disease among cattle has increased about 60 per cent in the past year, reports the Marion county extension office.

Marion county rated close to average in Oregon in connection with the testing and only 1.02 per cent of nearly 30,000 dairy and beef cattle inspected were reactors. State wide, .984 per cent of 276,000 cattle were reactors. This is the lowest percentage on record since this herd health program has been in effect.

Mrs. George Rein, Ray Ward, Mrs. Bert Osburn, Mrs. Frank Mohlman, Mrs. W. F. Lieske, Mrs. Leonard Ahnsmacher, Donald Duncan and Dale Sullivan.

The increased interest in livestock health points to an important phase of the industry in the Willamette valley, the expansion office believes.
