Solon Would Turn Clock Back 10 Years

Oklahoma City (AP) — Legislators here predict there will be some compromise — like using the 1930 census.

Oklahoma House of Representatives voted to use the 1940 census figures, not 1950, to apportion funds to counties from a one cent gasoline levy. Some legislators had discovered their counties had lost population and they would get a smaller cut of the cash.

But senators decided the one thing they had no control over was progress. They reinstated the 1950 figures.

Now the bill goes to a conference committee. Experts here predict there will be some compromise — like using the 1930 census.
