

Salem, Dallas Swing Into Tourney Action Today

Eugene-Teams from smaller schools such as Lakeview, Ontario, Clatskanie, etc., which have played all season in crackerbox gymnasiums, are struck with awe when they first take the floor at McArthur court, site of the 35th annual Oregon state Class A basketball tournament this week . . . when the boys go out on the playing floor for a practice session, they swear that the basketball court is the biggest they have ever seen . . . and they wonder how they're ever going to be able to work their always a t fast break or their zone defense on such a huge, huge tournament.

Just an Illusion

Actually, the playing floor at McArthur court isn't any bigger than many of the floors those same boys have played on during the regular season . . . but there is something about the vastness of the "igloo" in general the tier upon tier of seats, the huge overhanging girders, the steel structures holding the glass backboards, and the loud echo of balls bouncing in an empty gym during practice sessions . . . those things all make the place seem twice its size.

Impaired Vision No Handicap

Gordon Fahlgren, 6-3 left-handed center for the Clat-skanie Tigers, is blind in the right eye . . . Fahlgren is a hook-shot specialist, and being left-handed most of his hook shots are fired from the left side of the basket . . . his blind eye, then, is the one nearest the basket . . . but that doesn't seem to bother Fahlgren . . . he sank three land of Portland at 7:30 in atraight southpaw hocks from the left side of the basket other first rounders. to keep Clatskanie in the game opposite Marshfield during the first half of the tournament's opening game last

Even Fooled His Coach

Reminds us of another basketballer who had defective vision . . . Doug Logue, who finished out a brilliant career with Willamette university a year ago, had only 10 percent vision in one eye . . . he overcame that handicap so thoroughly that his coach, John Lewis, didn't even know about it until Logue's senior year.

Maple Back at Regular Seat

Howard Maple, former Willamette university basket-ball coach, and later proprietor of the sporting goods store on State street in Salem, now operated by Howard Wicklund, is back at his usual state tournament seat behind press row . . . Maple, now the Studebaker agent in Bend, buy's a season ticket for the same seat in Mc-Arthur court for every state tournament . . . with him this year is Tommy Hunt, the former Salem Leslie junior high school basketball star who, as an orphan, was adopted by Maple, and became a basketball and baseball ace at Bend high school.

Farnam One of Helpers

University of Oregon athletes are again assisting with the state high school tournament . . . some of the Duckhoopers sweer the floor between games, some keep wouldbe shortcutters from shortcutting across corners of the basketball court, some help teams with their equipment, others assist on campus parking lots, etc. . . . Keith Farnam, former Salem high state tournament star who just completed his senior year on the UO basketball team, is one of the equipment jockeys . . . he helps team managers carry equipment between the dressing room and bench . . . Keith says he likes the job because it keeps him busy only at halftimes and between games, and that way he can watch all the games.
