

Dunking May Await Losers

Male members of the losing class in connection with the presentation of Willamette university's annual Freshman Glee are once more in danger of being dunked in the Mill stream that borders the campus.

involved in swallowing some of the water which heretofore has contained disease bearing germs, the practice of tossing students into the stream has been under ban during the past two years.

However, Dr. Ralph Purvine, university physician, is quoted as saying that recent tests show that the stream now contains few harmful germs. Hence the losers once more face the possibility of a cold plunge next Monday forenoon.

Bonneville Pool Changes Made

Beginning April 5, the Bonneville pool will be lowered from its present elevation of 78 feet to 73.5 feet, says a notice sent out by Col. T. H. Lipscomb, district engineer.

It is expected that elevation 73.5 feet will be reached at 8 a.m. April 9.

The change will cause the pool to be held at approximately elevation 73.5 feet until the flow in the river reaches 260,000 second feet. The pool will then be gradually raised to an elevation of 82 feet when the flow equals 490,000 second feet.

After the peak of the spring run-off, as the flow decreases, this procedure will be followed in reverse order, and the pool elevation will be returned to a normal 78 feet.

All changes will be accomplished gradually. Elevations are mean sea level at Bonneville Dam.
