

Comedy Stars Appear on TV

Appearance of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Eddie Cantor, Bob Hope, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, and Donald O'Connor on the "Colgate Comedy Hour," Sunday, March 22 (NBC-TV network, 8:00 p.m. PST), when the series has its 100th telecast, will be another in a long list of firsts for the Sunday evening extravaganza.

The "Colgate Comedy Hour" inaugurated several developments in television. It was the first program to bring the big-name comedians to TV on a regular basis. It also evolved the rotating format for the stars which was adopted by millions of viewers. This was the first major show to make the shift to the west coast, and also was the first commercial program to be beamed across the country on the coaxial cable.

In addition to the "regular" stars of the series, the program, now in its third season, has displayed the efforts of over 300 top guest stars and outstanding supporting acts representing every facet of show business.

From motion pictures, stage, radio, recording studios and night clubs the "Colgate Comedy Hour" has drawn topflight talent from Abbott and Cos-

Lebanon Sewer Contract Let

Lebanon—Low bid on construction of a city sewage disposal plant offered by Henry Den Herder, Lebanon, and H. G. Carl, Salem, a joint venture, has been approved by the engineering firm of Cornell, Howland, Hayes and Merrifield. The bid was awarded to the bidders by the city council at its meeting this week.

The winning contractors offered the low bid of $219,569.33. Ten bids were received, the highest being $345,076, and all were referred to the engineering firm for study.

The primary treatment plant will be started in approximately a month, Den Herder said, with work during that period sub-contracted to H. C. Werner of Eugene who will excavate trenches for the outfall line from the site near the Crown Zellerbach paper mill to the river, and for the intake line from the sewage system to the plant site.

Den Herder said completion of the plant will require one year.

Ralph Roderick, consultant engineer for the engineering firm, had permission from the council to negotiate for a different type of grid chamber, saying that cost of plant construction could be lowered by that means.

The Lebanon firm is currently constructing similar sewage disposal plants at Albany and Cottage Grove. The low bid on the Lebanon work was made possible by these companion projects, Den Herder stated, since he will be able to move many of his construction forms already prefabricated to the local site.

Reserves Go To Pendleton

Members of Salem's Third 155mm gun battalion, Marine Corps reserves, will be taking their two weeks of summer training at Camp Pendleton, Calif., June 13-27.

The dates were given Capt. Cecil Gardener commander of the Salem unit, and Maj. Joseph L. Svejkosky, who heads the instructor group here, at a pre-summer camp conference held at Camp Pendleton March 16-18.

Marine air transport planes will fly the unit to and from camp, flying into Salem to pick them up on June 16.

In past years the Salem unit has taken its training during the late summer, but this year the earlier date has been set for summer training so that all of the 155mm gun units from reserves west of the Mississippi river may train at the same time.

Salem's unit presently has five officers and 27 enlisted men.
