In one area last year, a planned program—now in use throughout the company—helped us increase gasoline mileage more than two miles per gallon.

HOW WE STRETCH YOUR TELEPHONE DOLLARS

Even small economies add up to large savings as we work to hold down costs of bringing you service

1. Every family these days knows how important it is to make dollars stretch. And so it is in the telephone business, too. We've always been economy minded, of course. And we never stop trying to make every dollar go farther than ever. Take our cars and trucks alone.

By keeping tires fully inflated, by avoiding fast starts and following other good driving practices, tests indicate we may save as much as $150,000 on a company-wide basis this year. And we're working in many other ways, large and small, to hold our operating costs down.

2. This machine does double duty—digging a trench and placing cable in a single operation. Previously, machines were used to dig the trenches, but the cable had to be placed in the trenches by hand. It's capable of placing fifteen feet of cable per minute, a saving of up to 60 per cent in time... which means that jobs are done faster and cost less.

3. Installing aerial cable is easy for this mechanical cable "lasher." A lineman starts it on its quick trip from one pole to the next, and as it is pulled along it secures the cable to the wire strand which supports it. It's as neat as a sewing machine stitching a seam. The result: faster, more economical operation, and substantial savings in telephone dollars.

We're saving pennies—
and dollars, too!

These economies are typical of the many ways—both large and small—that we stretch your telephone dollars. And over the years, they add up to big savings in our operating budget... savings which enable us to bring you fine telephone service at prices which make your telephone a good friend of the family budget.
