Peg in Washington

BY ALENE (PEG) PHILLIPS

Washington, D.C., March 25.

Dear Marian:
Life here is so full of surprises for me . . . Someone is always getting an idea about something to do and it sounds good to me so I'm just the one who doesn't say "no" . . . Monday night took in the Lawrence Melchior show . . . Continue to see many people known in Oregon.

A pleasant contact resulting from a Salem Zonta club friendship has been meeting Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Myers. He is a brother of Mrs. Robert McEwan of Salem and Sunday the Myerses took me for a delightful drive to Frederick, Maryland, where Barbara Fritchie's house is a well-marked spot. We drove to the top of Braddock Heights, where beautiful vistas north and south inspire Mrs. Myers with the desire to have a summer cabin on the hilltop . . . Dinner at attractive Olney Inn and the opportunity of becoming acquainted with an interesting couple added to the pleasant trip.

Lt. Commander and Mrs. Joseph Sienko, residents of the state of Washington, but more recently in Florida because of his service assignment, were office visitors last week and disappointed to find that the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Douglas McKay were out of the city all week. Mrs. Sienko is a cousin of Wayne Hadley (son-in-law of the McKays) and they had hoped to discuss family news with the McKays.

A telephone call from New York was from Mrs. Wallace Hug (Pat Lee) who invited me to attend a Milgrim's fashion show in New York this week for which she is a co-hostess with another offic-

Sale 4 Days

An event for next week will be the annual pre-Easter sale sponsored by the Marion-Polk Medical Society auxiliary for the benefit of patients at the state tuberculosis hospital.

er's wife. Middle of the week gadding outside of Washington isn't in the schedule for me, however, and I am deferring a New York trip for a later week-end. Pat remarked that she was a bit lonesome for Salem in spite of the excitement of life in New York and a home in a lovely setting on the ocean front.

Temperatures in the 60-degree area are bringing on the cherry blossoms ahead of Cherry Blossom Week, which is scheduled to start April 8. A swing around the Tidal Basin with friends Friday night found a few trees already showing considerable color and others about to burst into full bloom. We drove on down the Potomac for dinner at an interesting spot and noticed how beautiful the yellow forsythia is as it is used in profusion in a great many plantings. The park across from my apartment has a mass of the yellow blooms as well as several white tulip trees. Children play in the park and adults stroll through it by day but it's given a wide berth at night. There's a marble statue which from my window looks like it could be the Goddess of Abundance but which I've never inspected more closely. The Dark Princess of Abandonment would be a more fitting title by night, I am told. It is too bad the park has such an atmosphere as it has many interesting trees and shrubs and a whole choir of song birds. Ever since the middle of January I've heard warbling and chirping (not whistling) birds outside my window which has made it seem like late spring in Oregon.

However, the bouquet of pussy willows that is silhouetted against the dining room wall is early spring in Oregon. Sincerely,
Peg.
