College Report

The reallocations recommended by Anderson is designed to meet the teacher shortage now faced in the state.

The proposal to grant general studies degrees at the three colleges of education was opposed by representatives of the University of Oregon. The board itself, rejected the plan for general studies in January but reversed itself in March.

Among those who favored the Anderson recommendations in addition to Cramer were Dr. Frank Bennett, president of the Eastern Oregon college of Education and former superintendent of Salem schools, Mrs. E. B. MacNaughton, a member of the board, Dr. Walter E. Snyder, superintendent of Salem schools, Chancellor Charles D. Byrne, W. L. Van Loan and Mrs. Martha Shull of Oregon Education association.

Dr. A. L. Strand, president of Oregon State college and citizens of both southern and eastern Oregon.

Opposing the bills and urging further study by the legislature of the subject were Dr. G. Herbert Smith, president of Willamette university, Charles A. Sprague, former governor; Dean Eldon Johnson of the University of Oregon.

Excellent Service Brings Silver Medal

A silver medal for meritorious service, the second highest available in the Department of Commerce, has been presented to Marvin E. Eisenbach of Seattle, a former Salem resident. Eisenbach, a Civil Aeronautics Administration electronics engineer, was cited for "extremely competent performance of duty in providing a stable and reliable radar system for the CAA and the military by the correction of complete engineering faults in the airport surveillance radar."

Eisenbach is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Eisenbach of the Middle Grove district. He is a graduate of Salem senior high school and has been interested in radio and radar during much of his life.

Maudy Thursday Services Scheduled

The First Congregational church will have Maudy Thursday communion services at 8 p.m. The service will include the reception of a number of persons into the membership of the church.

The communion will be conducted along lines of an early Fourth century service. In this service the gradual extinguishing of the lights is symbolic of the flight of the disciples, the approach of the dark hate of Jesus' enemies and the passion of the Lord. The moment of total darkness speaks of the central candle is prophecy of the single central candle is prophecy of the Easter soon to dawn.

Mrs. McKay

Mr. McKay leaves their apartment by 8:30 a.m. each day for the Interior Department and does not reach home until between 7 and 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

Asked what he does for recreation, Mrs. McKay promptly replied: "There is no recreation, no time for it."

Only twice since Mr. McKay has been in Washington has he been able to enjoy his favorite recreation, horseback riding, she reported.

Both Secretary and Mrs. McKay will be back in Oregon, May 29. They will be here in time for the Willamette university commencement and the following day the secretary is to be at a Portland Chamber of Commerce event. Then he returns to Washington for a short time, but will leave for the west again to arrive June 9.

He is to officiate at the dedication of the Detroit dam on June 10 and June 12 will be grand marshal for the Rose Festival parade in Portland.

"But I'll have two big weeks in Oregon at that time," Mrs. McKay added.

It looks, too, that they will be back in Oregon again in early August, the National Governor's Conference to be held then in Seattle.

"The more official events that are scheduled in the northwest the more I like it," Mrs. McKay said beamingly.

In Washington, Mrs. McKay does not go along with her husband on his business trips as much as she did when he was governor of Oregon, the office schedule being different from that in the Oregon capitol.

"But I go plenty," she quickly added.

Mrs. McKay makes it definite she does not discuss policies of the Department of the Interior, but she says many times in the east press people have asked her questions about the department.

"We just do not discuss them," she said.

Secretary McKay is to be heard on the radio again next Sunday, Easter day, on the Meel the Press program, his wife reports. Mr. McKay has made many appearances on the radio and television since going east but "he is taking it in stride," Mrs. McKay reports. Television does not seem to bother him. The programs mean extra work for the Secretary, however, because most of them are on Sunday and he has little chance to relax from his full week's work, she said.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. McKay is to be heard on a transcribed program over CBS between 5:30 and 6.

"It is just an informal program, just chatting like I am now," she explained.

Mrs. McKay was very happy to see the beautiful gardens at the Salem home. Gardening is one of her special interests.

When Mr. McKay told her last fall he was to be named Secretary of the Interior, one of her first comments was: "Oh, Douglas, I just planted $20 worth of bulbs."

Today, many of those bulbs are out and they are beautiful white hyacinths with some

Man Nabbed at Lebanon Signs Murder Confession

Seattle (AP) — Sheriff's Detective Chief Adam Lyskowski said that James Elwood Frazier, 23-year-old milkhand who was arrested at Lebanon, Ore., signed a confession Wednesday night to the March 6 killing of a suburban grocer in a holdup attempt.

Lyskowski said Frazier's "tough guy" pose cracked after 40 minutes of grilling and he signed a statement admitting the killing, nine holdups in Tacoma and two in the Seattle area.

Frazier was arrested in Lebanon, Ore., after Prosecutor Charles O. Carroll, reported two other accused men had named him as the man who actually fired the shot that killed Nunzio Salle, a Riverton grocer.

Frazier is charged with first degree murder in the holdup-slaying. John Lyle Wilson, 24, and Billy Joe Snowden, 23, arrested earlier this week in Tacoma, are charged with second degree murder.

His confession said he and Wilson entered the Salle store with the object of robbing it. Snowden waited outside. The statement said: "I cannot tell you how the gun discharged, but it did."

Frazier's statement said he and Wilson fled the store in panic. Snowden drove them white tulips soon to follow in the same flower beds.

As she chatted with her visitors Thursday morning, Mrs. McKay seemed to be patting this and that piece of furniture, she is so happy to be home. She reports their apartment in Washington is air conditioned so she is not dreading the warm summer too much.

"And we'll have an air conditioned Cadillac — but it is not at the expense of the government. This is 'grandma's car,'" she laughed.

Mrs. McKay says she has put away some scrapbook work and some needlepoint to do when activities slacken during the summer and she can enjoy the air conditioned apartment and car.

It has been a strenuous three months in Washington for Mrs. McKay because of the social activities welcoming the new president and the new cabinet members.

"They are so hospitable and friendly in Washington, the officials, the city, and the church groups. Everyone has been wonderful," she commented.

The McKays see much of the Oregon delegation in the national capitol because this is the first time an Oregonian has been in the cabinet, so all congressional events for Oregon and the northwest always include invitation to the cabinet member from Oregon.

And about those famous angel food cakes of Mrs. McKay. "Yes, I have made quite a few since I have been in Washington," she laughed.

On April 17 the McKays are to be hosts to all heads of departments in the Department of the Interior, the party to be at their apartment — and, of course, the special dessert will be the angel food cake for which Mrs. McKay has won many blue ribbons.

Ways-Means

Sen. Belton said that this condition had existed for 40 years, but would be corrected. Both he and Rep. Root declared that the criticism was not leveled at the board members.

Sen. Walker declared that he was not too enthusiastic over the idea of creating a position of legislative analyst, saying that by expanding some of the present agencies of the state, perhaps the same results could be obtained.

Favored an Analyst. However Rep. Dave Baum said that the legislature has no one to go out and dig up information and he favored the idea of a legislative analyst "as an arm of the legislature."

No action was taken after Sen. Walker suggested that each member of the nine-man ways and means committee study the proposal and be prepared to discuss it at the next general meeting.

Sen. Angus Gibson indicated that the budget of the Oregon Technical Institute, which was returned to the committee by the senate, will be returned to the main committee unchanged at the next meeting.

"If we are going to continue this institution, it should be operated properly," Gibson said.

Allies to Meel

In addition to events in Korea these were the latest developments in the "surprise a day" peace offensive.

Vishinsky Tactics Challenged. United Nations-Russia's Andrei Vishinsky, recently returned from Moscow, for the first time in seven years had no hard words for the West to put into the formal record on the U. N.'s disarmament efforts. This approach surprised Western diplomats but they noted the Soviet move contained no indication the Russians had abandoned their own ideas on how disarmament can be achieved.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe — Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway warned that the Soviet threat against the Western Allies had not diminished by one iota. In a speech at the second anniversary of SHAPE's creation, the NATO commander said Soviet Russia has increased and continues to increase her military capacity. He has made no mention of current Soviet peace moves.

Driver Arrested — Donald Clifford Cate, Portland, was arrested by city police Wednesday night on a charge of drunk driving. He pleaded innocent in municipal court Thursday morning and was released on $250 bail.

No Attempt

O'Malley opened his statement by branding the Warden's Association of America, the body that recommended the investigating warden, as a "reactionary group."

O'Brien Forced on Him. O'Malley said that he was forced to accept appointment by the board of control of Lawrence O'Brien as deputy warden, and declared "that while this man has apparently been loyal and has done his best, he is not properly qualified and has not been handling either the assignment of inmates, or the disciplinary problems in a proper manner."

The discharged official placed the blame for the fact that many of the guards were not properly instructed on an unnamed captain at the institution.

"For 18 months I have been trying to get the captain to issue post orders," O'Malley said. "Only now are they being compiled."

Blames Unnamed Captain. "I could take no disciplinary action against this captain as he had been installed by a member of the former board of control and since the appointment of a new board the legislature has been in session."

(Former members of the board were Douglas McKay, who was governor, and Walter J. Pearson, who was state treasurer.)

"The former member of the board had considerable influence in the legislature and I was afraid that if the captain was fired our legislative program would be endangered."

Answers Charges. In answer to charges in the investigators' report that the prison is apparently being run by the inmates, O'Malley declares that this condition existed when he took over the prison but states emphatically that the inmate organization has been eliminated "and while today inmates are not strictly regimented they are under control."

He denied that there were any "big shots" who received preferential treatment in the dining room, although he said that when he took over the institution, some prisoners ate steaks on one side of the dining room while those on the other side were eating beans.

Jobs Not Budgeted. O'Malley frankly admitted lack of adequate supervision in the prison kitchen but claimed this was due to the fact that additional positions had not been budgeted. Such positions are being requested in the budget for the next biennium.

Deficiencies noted in the investigators' report on the operation of the farm were shifted to the shoulders of Superintendent Alexander. O'Malley said that he furnished the men for the farm but had nothing to say about its operation. He also said that he was not aware that any men returned to the prison for violation of rules had been returned to the farm a few days later, as charged in the warden's report.

Prison Annex Farm. "The primary trouble at the annex farm," O'Malley said, "is that the head farmer spends more time riding a tractor than he does in supervising the operation of the farm."

O'Malley said that when he first came to the Oregon prison,

Dr. James C. Nichol (center), associate professor of chemistry at Willamette, continues with research in the field of moving boundary systems containing weak electrolytes, made possible by a one-year renewal of the Frederick Gardner Cottrell grant from Research Corporation in New York. Working with Dr. Nichol are chemistry majors Byron Fortsch and John Rockenfeller, both seniors from Salem.

evidence was presented by the state police that this man had accepted a gift with a wholesale value of $75 from an inmate.

"When I recommended that he be dismissed because of this my recommendation was ignored," he declared. O'Malley declares that he was not given complete authority to operate the institution saying that he had not been permitted to appoint all employees and a large number of them had not been responsible to him.

Prisoners Fined. The ousted warden declared that in every instance of an inmate beating up prison employees, severe disciplinary action was taken.

While the committee cited 25 cases of convicts beating up guards, and some of them several times, O'Malley says the record disclosed only three officers who were beaten up by more than one inmate.

"The others are records of where inmates resisted and were subdued while being confined," O'Malley said.

On Homosexuals. He further stated that the parole board was meeting outside the prison before he came, this in answer to the charge in the report that there was lack of cooperation on his part with the parole board. As to the charge that homosexuality is rampant in the prison, another committee assignment, O'Malley said that in every penal institution, there are some homosexuals but these are strictly segregated. He claims that he had received no complaint from members of the parole board on young prisoners fearing to seek pardons because of threats of older prisoners with whom they were having "love affairs."

Prisoners Fined. The ousted warden declared that in every instance of an inmate beating up prison employees, severe disciplinary action was taken.

Soviet Threat

Ridgway, in effect, thus called on six West European parliaments to ratify the highly controversial European army treaty, which would put some two million troops into one uniform and under one command. The treaty would bring West German troops into the West Europe defense buildup against possible Soviet aggression.

Only the West German lower house has so far approved the treaty. France, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Luxembourg have not done so.
