Woodburn May Lose Rural Fire Trucks

Woodburn — A notice was received Wednesday morning at the city hall that the rural fire protection district will sever its contract with the city of Woodburn July 1, 1953, unless the city gives "a definite committed answer as to how it is going to share with the district on a 50-50 basis on equipment and operation of the fire department."

The action was taken by the district board of directors Tuesday morning, following the defeat by Woodburn voters last Friday of a proposed six mill continuing levy to finance the fire department and a $15,000 bond issue to purchase a new fire truck.

Lester Henn, president of the rural district board, stated that his group wants assurance that the city's 1953-54 budget would include sufficient fire department funds to carry half of the cost of the dispatcher system and department operation.

The board also feels that the city should provide sufficient fire fighting equipment to protect itself, using the two rural-owned trucks now housed in Woodburn as secondary equipment. He contended that the city had not had sufficient equipment the past two years and that rural trucks had been used as primary city protection and that the rural district had not had sufficient co-operation from the city.

Decision June 30

Mayor Mattson, when informed of the district's intentions, stated that the city of Woodburn cannot now give a definite commitment to the district beyond June 30 of this year when the current budget expires. It is the intention of the council to provide the city's share of funds to continue the present dispatcher system and meet department costs in the 1953-54 budget but that this would probably require exceeding the 8 per cent limitation and need approval by the voters.

The city has reconditioned the LaFrance truck and it will be returned to service shortly. At that time the firemen will be instructed to answer city calls with this truck first and use rural equipment only when necessary.

The rural district now has three pieces of fire fighting equipment, two stationed in Woodburn and one in Gervais, and are contemplating the purchase of another smaller truck to be stationed in the Mission Bottom area. Several plans are being considered for housing and manning the rural equipment if it is moved out of Woodburn.

The Woodburn rural fire protection district was organized in 1946. Since that time one or more pieces of its equipment have been located in Woodburn under a contract whereby the city would house and man the equipment which would be available for use in both areas.
