By MIKE FORBES
Dallas, April 14—Dr. Isaac David Bartell, M.D., owner and operator of Bartell's hospital at 712 Court street, was arrested Tuesday morning charged with manslaughter by abortion.

Five Convicts

At the dump spot Winters suddenly sprang from the truck and started running across the field. The guards chased him and struck him a jolting blow with a billy, but he kept going.

While the guards were giving their attention to Winters the other four poured out of the truck, threatened the guards with knives and a steel club, and followed Winters.

As they ran they dropped four prison-made shivs, all razor-sharp, and a heavy steel rod evidently intended as a weapon.

Out on Penitentiary Road a state highway crew of five men was at work. Their car was parked nearby.

Dr. Bartell, through his attorney, denied the charge, stating that he would present the facts in the case at the proper time and place.

Dr. Bartell received his medical degree from the University of Oregon in June, 1931.

Air Transport

The crash scene is 35 or 40 miles southeast of Seattle, which had been the plane's destination. It was within a few minutes of its cross-country destination when it met disaster in the snow that fell a foot deep overnight atop the Cascades.

The twin-engine carrier, operated by Miami Airlines, Inc., of Florida, was bringing its military passengers to Seattle on a special charter flight.

The non-schedule airline's home office in Miami reported 12 of the soldiers were picked up in Washington and 10 others at Scranton, Pa.

A cryptic message at 2:07 a. m. from the plane told of the failure of one of its two engines. It was losing altitude and was down to 4,500 feet.

The final radio report was at 2:22 a. m. The pilot then was uncertain of his position.

The crew members were: Capt. Albert J. Lerette, Jr., Miami, the pilot; William E. Harahan, Miami, co-pilot; Adra Long, Berkeley, Calif., stewardess.

The names of the soldiers aboard were not available immediately.

House Votes

out of a total consumption of 1,260,000 long tons of new rubber."

The federally-owned facilities now are operated for the government by a number of rubber, petroleum and chemical companies.

The President told Congress that the nation's security in its rubber supply is of paramount importance in any consideration of disposal of the synthetic facilities.

Minimum Rates

"I may have some views on the subject but I consider this a fundamental question that must be decided by the legislature. It is the assembly's function to legislate and my office to administer the legislation that is enacted."

Carlin pointed out a complication in connection with regulation of rates on water carriers. This was a recent federal court decision, made by Judge Gus Solomon, in which it was held that water transportation on the Columbia river is interstate, even though the cargo is carried only between two Oregon points.

Therefore the state has no control over water carrier rates on the Columbia, where the principal water carriers ply.

He fled from a work crew that was working in the strawberry field, hospital authorities said. He is not considered dangerous.

The court has set up a policy of permitting a considerable lapse of time between the process of grading and graveling and the application of the final surface. Court members say this method provides a better job.

needs time to build up China, that the drain of the Korean war is greater than we realize, that Mao with proper incentive might become another Tito.

In Korea, Dulles feels that a new boundary drawn across the narrow waist, first would be easier to defend, second would give South Korea three-quarters of the population. But to get this line accepted by the Reds may not be easy. It will mean the withdrawal of Chinese troops from several thousand square miles of tightly held territory in which the Reds have dug trenches and underground rooms three tiers deep.

So in return for a retreat to the Korean waist, Dulles has been talking about throwing Chiang Kai-shek out the window—diplomatically speaking. In fact, he's actually talking more anti-Chiang than Dean Acheson who was pilloried by his enemies as the "Red Dean" because he didn't support Chiang.

Note—C. D. Jackson, former Fortune magazine publisher, now a close White House adviser, has had a private tiff with Secretary of State Dulles. Not long ago, Dulles reminded Jackson that he, not Jackson, was running the state department. But last week after the White House denial of the Dulles-inspired news stories, some White House advisers figured foreign policy might be better off if C. D. Jackson were running the state department.

When the escape alarm was sounded Monday afternoon all prisoners were locked in their cells so guards and officers could be released to join in the manhunt.

Warden Gladden said today he had discharged Charles Lemon, the gate guard, because he did not shake down the loaded truck thoroughly enough when it left the yard.

At Gervais the fugitives left the highway, drove across country to St. Paul and then to Newberg bridge. State Police had set up a roadblock at the north end of the bridge. The vehicle was on the bridge before the convicts saw it. They stopped the car abruptly and all jumped out. Winters jumped from the railing of the bridge and landed 30 feet below at the edge of the river. The other three took to the brush. All were caught minutes later.

When the convicts fled in the car with Meola, Marion Gleason, 1940 Fisher Road, Salem, and Rudolph Siegmund of Eugene, members of the highway crew, hurried to nearby State Police headquarters.

At the penitentiary the chase was organized by Warden Clarence T. Gladden and his assistants. While State officers and prison guards were following the commandeered car another posse was beating the brush between Salem and Turner in a futile effort to find Lind.

Warden Gladden said today he had placed the four men in segregation.

The joint committee reported a bill which authorizes an 80 per cent indemnity payment by the state for slaughtered swine infected with vesicular exanthema.

The meat packers had sought a full 100 per cent recovery from the state, but members of the sub-committee held that this was justified in view of the lack of knowledge of the disease and its control.

A bill outlining the duties of the state emergency board was passed out favorably. Among the new features of the powers of the board would be authority to hire personnel for such investigations that the committee deems necessary.
