The lovely conventionalized rendering of the leaf pattern of Masland's "Polonaise" seen in this photograph, gives this new broadloom happy affinity with either contemporary or 18th century furniture. "Polonaise" is a wool Wilton woven in high and low round wire pile lending unusual texture and luxurious softness underfoot. Notable in its good color line is the new shell, white an important color in today's floorcovering fashions.

Elegance Blends with the Practical in New Rugs

The design is graceful and flowing in two-tone effect. It is an overall pattern which makes for needed practicality as foot prints should never leave their mark on its surface.

"Polonaise" is shown in intriguing displays which offer
