G.O.P. FACTIONALISM RISES

One surprising thing about the current Washington scene is that the Republicans in congress are handling Eisenhower's cabinet members just as roughly as they handled Truman's official advisors after they won control of the congressional committees in 1946.

Several cabineteers have felt the power of unfriendly solons on Capital Hill. Wilson was put on the pan and forced to sell his General Motors stock. Benson has been under fire repeatedly for his farm policies. Weeks, the commerce secretary, faces a searching probe for ousting the chief of the bureau of standards. Durken, the labor secretary, is hardly listened to at all.

But possibly most serious of all because foreign policy is so crucial, is the rapid deterioration of relations between Secretary of State Dulles and the senate, which plays top role in foreign policy because it must ratify treaties.

McCarthy's one man war on Dulles has been amply publicized, but McCarthy is getting plenty of help from other senators, some on the foreign relations committee, such as Mundt of South Dakota, Bridges of New Hampshire and Ferguson of Michigan. These Republican senators object because Dulles hasn't made a house cleaning at the state department, but has left in office hundreds of officials who were there during the Truman-Acheson regime.

They have summoned Dulles before them for questioning and will question him further. If he fights back they may trim his appropriation. If he doesn't he will lose prestige at home and abroad. And the senate may pass the Bricker proposal to hamstring the treaty making power of the administration.

In short, the Eisenhower administration seems in for rough treatment from its own party members in congress, which are evidently out to provide the Democrats with plenty of ammunition for the 1954 campaign.

Up to a point a searching, critical attitude in congress who named them after five famous generals of the army too application and Kuhn on the ground they are present of the past. But a fractious, obstructive at the Bradley home to greet their godchildren... Contrary their godchildren... Contrary their godchildren... Contrary their godchildren to some reports. The is not a stockholder in the Marx Toy compress as well as in the administrative departments, and bring the Democrats back into power sooner than they should after their 20-year tenure.

EISENHOWER'S CHALLENGE

President Eisenhower's challenge to Russia to show that it really wants world peace it has been mumbling about to prove their will for peace by ending the Korean war, lifting the Iron Curtain from satellite countries and joining a world disarmament pact that would outlaw atomic warfare. It has had a favorable reaction all over the world except in communist countries. Even there the

There is not much optimism that the Kremlin will accept for hitherto Russia has blocked most such starts to peace and disarmament since the creation of the United Nations, and is still blocking an Austrian peace treaty and unification of Germany and renewing Red pressure in Southern Asia. But recently surprise reversals of some of Stalin's policies by Malenkov, as in Korea, give some hope of at least partial cooperation.

It may be that the struggle for power in the Kremlin among Stalin's successors, and popular opinion in Russia will foxe other concessions but time alone will tell. There are cannot be much enthusiasm in the Kremlin for Eisenhower's proposal to use the money saved on arms, and spend it for raising the standards of living in backward and depressed areas on a world scale, for the communists depend of peace and disarmament and isolation, though promoting fake peace talks and little action and there is no indication of abandoning world conquest for communism.

The British had become under Labor rule the highest taxed people on earth and their Conservative opponents have continued the setup with little change until now, because the government was hard pressed for revenue.

Announced purpose of the reduction is to encourage people to work harder and risk more by allowing them to keep a little larger slice of what they produce. The British tax was clearly retarding initiative, both by individuals and corporations. Workers were reluctant to accept overtime, which usually put them into a higher tax bracket. People with money said "what's the use?" and let it lie idle, since the government would take most of the return anyway.

Britain has gone farther than the United States in socializing incomes, and has suffered the inevitable result, drying up of initiative. So it was natural that Britain would draw back once the effects were clear. It now remains for us to do the same thing, but congress better get our national expenses and receipts into line first,

BRITISH CUT INCOME TAXES

While the United States is talking about an income tax reduction the British have gone ahead and done it, with slashes ranging from five to 17 per cent, effective with the fiscal year that began April 1.

The purchase tax, which is the same as our sales tax, has been reduced 25 per cent. This levy was far higher than any ever levied in the U.S. on what the Britons regard as luxury goods, autos, radios, T-V sets, refrigerators and the like. The purpose was to discourage purchase as much as to raise revenue.

The British had become under Labor rule the highest.

POOR MAN'S PHILOSOPHER

Cigar Smoking Italian Star Likes Skyscrapers

New York (47)—"I love your skyscrapers — they are like stretching tentacles, pleading for the sky" said the world's highest paid actress.

Then Anna Magnani of Italy leaned back in bed and took a thoughtful puff on her cigar. So I leaned back, too—in a puff on the cigar she had given me.

It actually is called a cigar-illo—a slender plastic-timed.

"I like your New York," she live for itself," she explained. "But in the daytime a city only works for the people in it."

As I started to leave Anna exploded like a volcano. She cause it is so noisy. Two and down on the bed, shook pigeons on the ledge woke me up this morning, quarrelling and down on the bed, shook hands, pulled a hank of her bigeons on the ledge woke me up this morning, quarrelling and down on the bed, shook hands, pulled a hank of her bigeons on the ledge woke me up this morning, quarrelling and down on the bed, shook hands, pulled a hank of her bigeons on the ledge woke me up this morning, quarrelling and down on the bed, shook hands, pulled a hank of her bigeons on the ledge woke me up this morning, quarrelling.

Anna, born in utter poverty, now lives in a five-room penthouse built on an old palace in Rome. She says she prefers small towns, because she has a fear of distance and bigness, but loves to prowl cities at night.

"At night a city is free to make a miderian moustache and broke out in laughter. Twisting her luxuriant hair is one of her childlike mannerisms. I asked her why she did it.

"IT keeps me company," she sald. "Goodbye. They make me do too many things. Some time I would like to come back to this country when I could be free to be free."
