Dick Fisher, 265 South 19th street, nails down a loose stringer as his inspector, Fred Gregor (left) and Chief Derby Inspector Bill Page check measurements and construction before he starts finishing touches of covering and painting. Fred and Bill found two minor items for Dick to change before finishing the racer. Dick, who also raced last year, plans to have his racer finished and the wheels well run in long before race time. Troast Jersey GOP Nominee

Newark, N.J. (AP) — Republican Paul L. Troast, wealthy businessman who heads the New Jersey Turnpike Authority, will oppose country lawyer Robert B. Meyner, a Democrat, in the state's gubernatorial election this fall.

The 58-year-old Troast, making his first bid for public office, smashed to a 52,000 vote victory over State Sen. Malcolm S. Forbes, in Tuesday's GOP primary election.

Meyner's battle was a squeaker. The Democratic contest, first in the state in three decades, was a horse race with Meyner and Wene, 61-year-old Vineland chick breeder, jockeying back and forth as the vote was tabulated throughout the night.

With 57 election districts missing—most of them in rural areas—Meyner had a slim 2,978 vote lead in the unofficial tabulation.

Washington (AP) — Full utilization of U. S. timber resources on a sustained-yield basis would require construction of about 16,707 miles of access road, the Forest Service believes.

The mileage—roughly comparable to five cross-continental highways—was included in testimony made public Wednesday by a House Appropriations Subcommittee.

Edward P. Cliff, assistant chief of the Forest Service, said total cost of the roads would be 255 million dollars of which the government would spend about 90 million on main-stem roads and 22 1/2 million on surveys and planning.

Timber operators "could reasonably be expected to spend 109 million" with about 34 million coming from local government agencies, he estimated.

Indochina Reds Drive in Laos

Hanoi, Indochina. (AP) — Communist-led Vietminh forces brought the Plain de Jarres under mortar fire Wednesday night but made no immediate attempt to open what could be a crucial battle in the seven-year-old war in Indo China.

French and Laotian forces are awaiting an attack by the Vietminh on the broad rain-soaked plain 200 miles southwest of Hanoi in the kingdom of Laos.

The enemy, now in its 10th day of an almost unopposed drive into Laos, pumped shells onto the plain but made no attempt to attack in force.

The Vietminh may skirt the French-Laotian base and drive west and southwest in an effort to capture the royal capital of Luangprabang and the administrative capital of Vientiane.
