No other nominations were made for the temporary position, but Clyde Everett resigned.

Anti-Trust

The criminal action involved charges of a world-wide understanding by major domestic and foreign companies to control oil distribution and prices. Pressing of the case was held up during the Truman administration when questions arose as to whether it might bring out information damaging to national security.

Preliminary to dropping the criminal case, the Justice Department last week filed a civil anti-trust suit against Standard Oil Co. of New York, Standard Oil of California, Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. Inc., The Texas Co. and the Gulf Oil Corp.

Attorney General Brownell said at the time that the list of defendants might be expanded later to include other oil corporations, domestic and foreign.

Weeks Stales

"When tax money stops going to pay for weapons and the waste of war, it will be spent by the public for the things the ingenuity of management can produce," the secretary predicted.

One of the greatest stimulants, he said, would be the "new war on world poverty" proposed by the president in his speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The conception is "no mere tin cup charity," Weeks said, but an attainable condition "in which rising living standards abroad would seek and pay for American exports."

Parking Meters

Hamilton said parking has been provided for 55 cars on Marion and Union and 31 on Capitol, a total of 86, while on the parking lot in the shopping center 400 cars can be accommodated.

The council had invited representatives of 13 districts in the city where limited but unmetered parking prevails to appear and be heard on the meter question. Only Hamilton and two representatives from South Commercial appeared.

The city budget committee is recommending to the council that all restricted parking districts, where half-hour, hour, or two-hour parking is used, be metered to provide more city revenue.

For South Commercial Roy Adsett and Clayton Jones appeared and said there was no call for parking restrictions in that district.

Claim Convicts

Morgan said the Legislature never intended that the land clearing contracts should be negotiated by an employee of the board.

"I am very tired of seeing official misconduct in this state go unnoticed by those in authority," Morgan wrote.

George Alexander, prison superintendent who has had charge of prison work operations, denied that convicts had been used for land clearing.

"We cut wood for the use of state institutions in several places in the Jefferson area," Alexander said, "but no convicts have been used for land clearing. I can't tell from Morgan's letter as to what he refers, but it undoubtedly was a place where we cut wood."

Gov. Patterson hasn't been available to the press for several days. He hasn't held his usual daily press conference for a week.

UN Tells Reds

Harrison got tough at the outset. He reminded the Communists they themselves had urged resumption of armistice negotiations.

"It was hoped that we might be able to agree on a reasonable and honorable armistice which would protect the human rights of the prisoners of war that caused us to consent to resume meetings," Harrison said.

While the truce meeting was held, the U.N. turned over 491 Communist prisoners at the exchange center here. They included 31 stretcher cases and 13 mental cases. The Communists handed over the last of the U. N. prisoners Sunday.

City Council Votes on Disputed Street Issues

Some unusual actions were taken by the city council Monday night on petitions for street improvement.

In one case the council voted to improve a street regardless of the fact that a majority of the property ownership remonstrated against it.

In another case the protest of one citizen was sufficient to get an improvement petition represented over 50 per cent of the affected property.

In a third case an improvement was defeated by withdrawal of names from the petition.

Property owners on Taft street petitioned for improvement from Madison to the terminus of Taft. Salem Linen Mills, holding a majority of the property, remonstrated. The council invoked a new charter provision whereby the city may improve a street regardless of a majority remonstrance if it considers hazard or traffic convenience make it necessary.

City Needs One Way Grid, Mayor Thinks

The city would like to provide a one way grid in the central area but probably will not have funds to do it this year, Mayor Al Loucks told Kiwanians at a panel discussion today.

The mayor said the grid should be bounded by Commercial, Marion, Ferry and Capitol and will be in order when the old bridge is reopened, about Dec. 1, but that at least $30,000 will be needed and it is not being placed in the current budget.

Loucks answered everything tossed his way, covering such widely varied queries as poison oak in Bush park, sheep in the cemetery, poor lighting on east State, rumors that the West Salem fire station will be closed, which he said are without foundation, delays in developing parks here, and many others.

Other city officials sat at the head table and answered some of the questions. President Jim Hunt presided.

Smuggle

He said he did it under orders from the communist underground in 1943, and that "the comrade in charge said it would be of great use to our comrades in Russia."

Mason related that he had an "unhappy experience" as the leader of a prep school strike in Cleveland. As a result, he said, the school authorities refused to recommend him for a job when he finally was graduated from Ohio University.

Embittered, he said, he looked upon himself as "the man behind the eight ball" and joined the Communist party in 1938.

He said he advanced swiftly in Communist circles to the role of spy, first in the Dupont plant and then at General Motors.

He said he told leaders at a Communist meeting that he had obtained a job in Dupont and had been promoted to the position of chemical operator in its insecticide division sometime between 1941 and 1943.

"They assigned me the task of acquiring the formula," he said, and added that he delivered. He said he found the formula unprotected in the superintendent's office one day, copied part of it and memorized the rest.

He said he did not deliver it until 1943, after leaving the plant for ill health and moving to a hide-out on a farm near Cleveland where Communists used to get extra supplies of rationed gasoline from the farmer. He mentioned no names.

He said it was not until the period between 1945 and 1950 that "I began to have certain doubts" about the Communist line and whether he had done something wrong.

In reply to a question City Attorney Chris J. Kowitz said the council does not have to grant an improvement petition even though it is petitioned for by more than 50 per cent of the property ownership.

Improvement of Englewood avenue from Kingwood drive to Margaret street had been petitioned for by a majority of the property owners. Two weeks ago Justice James T. Brand of the state supreme court and Mrs. Brand withdrew their names from the petition, but it still had over the required 50 per cent.

Last night Clyde Everett withdrew his name, which reduced it to 48 per cent, which caused City Engineer J. H. Davis to recommend that no further proceedings be made. In addition were two other withdrawals, and the council adopted Davis' recommendation.

Street improvement resolutions adopted included:

Frederick street from Thompson to Catterlin; Hyde from Ford to 23rd; South 23rd from Hyde to Claude.

Petitions for street improvement received were:

Forest Hills way from Longview to the westerly terminus of Forest Hills way; Granada way from Hansen to Haight.
