A shot at world's junior heavyweight champion Danny McShain is in store for the winner of a one-night wrestling tournament at the Salem armory tonight.

Eight grapplers will compete in the tourney, with a drawing for pairings to be made just before the start of the 8:30 tournament.

Eliminations will be conducted on regular single-elimination style used in the state basketball tournament. All matches will be one fall or 15 minutes to a decision by ringside judges.

Contestants in the tournament are:

Carl Engstrom, popular graduate of DePaul university. Handsome and talented. Has been wowing the fans in the Seattle area for weeks. Rated high all over the country.

Tony Ross of Salem, back from El Paso, Texas, just in time to throw his hat in the ring. He wrestled Lou Thesz, world's heavyweight champion, recently, and is itching for a chance at the world's junior heavy champ.

Al Szasz, popular Hungarian star who took the measure of Don Kindred last week. Szasz was scheduled to have met Eric Pederson last week, with the winner of that to get the chance at McShain, but an injury prevented Pederson from appearing. Szasz still wants the Den Benson, the WU freshman whiz led the Bearcats with wins in both hurdles and a third in the javelin. Benson tied his own school mark in the high sticks with a 15.3 performance.
