

Farmers Told To Be Careful

Willamette valley farmers who are now hiring school children to work in the fields got a warning Tuesday that they face fines as high as $10,000 plus imprisonment.

State Labor Commissioner W. E. Kimsey, who enforces the child labor laws, said rural school officials appealed to him to crack down on the farmers who have been hiring children for full-time farm jobs.

Kimsey said the school officials report that in some schools, children have been quitting their classes in wholesale lots. One union high school in Marion county reported 15 per cent of its students have dropped out to work in the fields.

During the school year, children under 16 can work only outside of school hours. All children under 18 years old have to attend school unless they have finished high school.

"There is no excuse for farmers to raid schools for field labor at this time since there is a surplus of adult workers readily available to any farmer needing help," Kimsey said.

"The schools have co-operated with the farmers by arranging their schedules for early closings. By the time the farm labor situation does become tight, children will be out of school and ready to help farmers harvest crops," he added.

Big Firm Now Operating Here

The largest outlet for irrigation equipment in the Willamette valley, and probably in the Northwest, is now a going concern in Salem.

The firm is Moore's Irrigation company, which is owned and operated by Gene Walper, Kenneth Bush and Henry E. Bush. The men are irrigating engineers, and Walper has traveled all over the world in connection with that profession.

The firm has been operating in the Willamette valley for four years with an establishment at Corvallis, which will continue, with the Salem operation added. The location here is at 825 Bassett street, where the Gerlinger Products company was formerly located.

The company manufactures irrigation couplings, valves and fittings for portable irrigation, and distributes all kinds of pumping machinery for industrial and farm applications.

At peak operation the company employs about 20 men.

ROYAL SALUTE

Young King Hussein I of Jordan salutes the crowd as he enters a car outside the Mosque at Amman after his accession to the throne. The Cascade Title company and the City Cafe were damaged by the fire which Surfus said spread from a box of rubbish in the title company basement. Occupants of apartments above the title company were routed by the blaze.

Surfus was overcome by smoke while fighting the fire, but was revived. A variety of the buffalo or bison once ranged as far north as Great Slave Lake.

Magnet Picks 22,630 Lbs. From Roads

The Oregon Highway Commission's traveling magnet picked up 22,630 pounds of material last year from the state's highways.

The metal picked up included many nails, tacks and other sharp articles that could puncture tires.

The magnet, operated by one man, traveled 12,584 miles during the year at a cost of $8,267.

The quantity of material picked up is more than double the amount of metal picked up in 1950.

The commission has operated the magnet for nine years.

A generation ago, most hogs were fed for 10 to 16 months before going to market while today many hogs are marketed after five or six months.

Removal of Debris Starts at Lebanon

Lebanon—City residents are removing rubbish and cleaning residential areas this week under the leadership of Mayor Elmer Fitzgerald.

Trucks toured all east side streets Wednesday picking up free all rubbish left on the curbs. Thursday the trucks moved to the west side for similar work.

In addition special attention is being given to the tidy appearance of all city property by a clean-up crew of city employees.

Eugene Has Fire in Business District

Eugene (P)—Damage from a fire in downtown Eugene Tuesday was estimated by Fire Chief Ed Surfus at $15,000.
