3 in Oregon Die in Crashes

Three men died Tuesday from injuries suffered in Oregon traffic accidents.

Doyle Johnson of the Myrtle Creek area, died in the blazing cab of his log truck after it went through a bridge railing, dropped 20 feet and caught fire 3 ½ miles east of Riddle. Police speculated that his brakes failed and that he drove into the railing to avoid hitting another logging truck coming from the other direction.

Jack Hartman, about 60, of Heppner, died Tuesday after a car in which he was a passenger struck a bridge abutment Monday night. Price Greenup, also about 60, died Monday, shortly after the accident.

Lloyd W. Wise, 71, of Yoncalla, died after being struck by a car on a highway south of Drain Tuesday night. State police said he had stepped into the path of an oncoming car after stopping his automobile to investigate motor trouble.
