THE CAPITAL JOURNAL, Salem, Oregon

Earlier this week we made a jaunt up the McKenzie river, to get a first-hand idea of fishing conditions on this famous stream. While the river is still a bit high, fishing with flies and with spinning tackle has been good. Marion Elston of Leburg, one of THE top anglers on the river, tells us that the fishing will really be good in the not too distant future when the caddis flies hatch. When we asked Elston when to expect the caddis flies hatch, his reply was "when the wild hawk screams". So, when you hear a high-pitched sound that isn't coming from the mother-in-law, wife or kids, it just might be a hawk, and the caddis flies wil be hatching on the McKenzie! When Marion finished passing on the old wives' tale way out of his most prolonged

When Marion finished passing on the old wives' tale just related, he got serious for a moment and remarked: "This spinning tackle has me worried. I'm sfraid it's going "This spinning tackle has me worried. I'm airaid it's going to clean out the river, it's so effective. It's nothing too unusual to see twenty-inch trout hooked and landed on it. Flies get a lot of the small ones, but spin-fishing accounts for the big fish." Of course, the law states that no fish over 14 inches can be kept on the McKenzie, and we hope that anglers will be sportsmen and release those over-size fish. It's our opinion that a real sportsman will take ne more than his fair share of fish, and will observe the laws, regardless of his tackle and his good fortune. Sadiy emough, there are still a great many game hogs who "ain't enough, there are still a great many game hogs who "ain't got religion", and have very little interest in conservation. We hope that the ranks of the greedy grow thinner each year. Lots of good fishing in coast streams has been reported in the past few days. Limit catches have been made on the Siletz, in particular. Tony Buisman, Salemite, who has a moorage on the lower river, says that many anglers trolling ford fenders and worms have been coming in to his landing with limit catches. While the ford fender and similar monstrous with limit catches. While the ford fender and similar monstrous spinners are quite effective devices for cuthroats, lots of anglers are using much smaller spinners successfully. No doubt about it, the cumbersome ford fender type spinner is not the most sporting lure. A small fish especially has hardly a chance to put up a fight against such a weight hooked to his jaw. It's usually just a smal single blade spinner and fly combination on either a fly or spinning rod can provide plenty of excitement, even with a twelve inch trout. We've been lucky many times trolling a thumb-nail spinner and red and black streamer. When the fish are on the strike, they will hit this rig will great eagemess.

black streamer. When the fish are on the strike, they wi hit this rig with great eagerness. We read recently about a friendly arrangement be-tween Bend anglers and a farmer, which resulted in the farmer allowing construction of access stiles over his fences, to make it possible for anglers to reach upper Deschutes waters more readily. We hope that more sport groups will develop this kind of harmony with land owners. Farmers have put up with countless abuses by sports-men over the years, and it behooves all of us in the busy outdoor season ahead to respect the man who owns the land we want to use. Such consideration will bring real reward to all of us who love the out-of-doors.
