Annual Scout Circus Colorful Spectacle

The Boy Scout circus, under the sponsorship of the Salem Lions club, has become one of the traditions of the capital and that of last Saturday night at Waters field was no par of those that have gone before.

In spite of temperatures that were far from comfortable and a threat of rain, a crowd approaching the 2000 mark saw the youngsters demonstrate their skills during a two hour performance. A parade downtown preceded the events at the ball park.

The grand finale was the showing of the Scout insignia and the United States flag in colored fireworks atop the tower constructed by Explorer Post No. 18 of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic church.

The chariot race, highlight in every circus, was won by Troop 41, Keizer Community club. Second place went to Troop 65, Monitor fire department. The Flying Carpet event was taken by Troop 54, Gervais Farmers Union and second place went to Troop 14, Oregon School for the Deaf.

Awards made in connection with the parade include:

Informal Meet

In a review of foreign problems Churchill told the house of commons:

1. The compromise truce proposals offered by the communists in Korea should be given "sympathetic and patient examination."
2. Western Germany needs to be incorporated soon into the western defense set up. Britain intends to stand firmly behind her commitments to Western Germany.
3. Britain will discuss arrangements for providing an international defense of the Suez Canal Zone but British troops will defend themselves if the Egyptians try to start trouble there.

Piecemeal Solutions
4. A piecemeal solution of problems with Russia was better than no settlement at all. This could be interpreted as mild criticism of President Eisenhower's recent all inclusive peace plan.

5. The position of French-led forces in Indochina has improved, partially because of the advent of the rainy season there. He warned the west not to assume too hastily that Moscow is calling the tune for the military movement in Indochina.

Churchill clearly showed that he believed the death of Stalin has brought about an important new factor in world diplomacy.

Club No. 17—Townsend club No. 17 will meet at the George Johnson home, 1335 North 18th street, at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Reports concerning the state meetings held in Portland Sunday will be made.

Control Tower

Dilatash and one other controller, R. J. Fisher, have been in Salem ever since the tower reopened here February 28, 1949. Other controllers are Bob Magill, Royce Miller and Fred Granger. All are married, four have families and three own their homes in Salem.

Discontinuance of the tower at the airport will mean that planes landing and taking off from there may use either runway that they choose and can go any direction that they choose. Also there will be no control of traffic and the planes will be on their own on determining which lands and takes off first.

The letter received from the regional office in Seattle by Dilatash Monday stated that Helena, Montana, was the other CAA control tower in the Seventh region, which includes Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho, listed for closing. Helena, however, has been a combined airways communications station and control tower. The communications station will remain.

Concerning the instrument landing system, the letter from Bendinger said: "The ILS monitoring is to be discontinued unless it is feasible to have this accomplished by the weather bureau. If not, automatic equipment will be provided, which will shut the equipment down in event of malfunctioning."

Salem will probably lose another government installation in the economy move—the district CAA engineer's office. The Salem office is one of 11 in the Seventh Region, which is being consolidated with the Sixth Region to form a larger area (the Fourth Region) with headquarters in Los Angeles. Three area offices will be located in the new region.

In charge of the local CAA district office is Jake Fryberger, district airport engineer. He has an assistant engineer and a secretary in his office. Still in the rumor department, but being circulated as a rumor is the fact that the weather bureau in Salem might be affected by the economy drive.

Jack Bartlett, state director of aeronautics, was one of those hearing the rumor and he has contacted Hugh Spangler, regional administrator in Salt Lake City, asking information on the matter. No word has yet been received from Spangler.

A few years ago a move was made to reduce the hours that the Salem weather bureau would operate during the day. Protests from the city administration, the Chamber of Commerce, farmers in this area and various organizations prevented that move.

Two Resignations Sent to White House
Washington (AP) — President Eisenhower Monday accepted the resignation of William H. Draper, Jr., as U. S. special representative in Europe for economic assistance.
The White House also announced the resignation of Howard K. Travers as ambassador to Haiti. Travers gave ill health as his reason. Both resignations are effective June 30. No successor was announced to either man.

Engineers Make Survey — Marion county engineers will visit a section of the road up the Little North Fork of the Santiam river Tuesday where a change is being made in connection with the installation of a power line. The expense of the change in the road is to be borne by those interested.

Loucks Seeks

On the other side of the picture the mayor and some of the aldermen think Franzen has fallen down on public relations, and that as an administrator he doesn't measure up to his engineering ability. As the mayor puts it "we feel that some of the city departments are running him instead of his running them."

Eugene Plan Liked
The mayor declined to name the departments, but the engineering and the fire departments would be two of them, and probably the police department the other. Franzen has a firmer hold on the water department because part of his salary is paid out of its revenues. It is actually under the city manager although it operates separately from other city activities and with a separate financial set-up.

But the major difference between Mayor Loucks and the city manager relates to organization of the city council. The old mayor-council government that preceded the managerial form was one of standing committees. The council had over a dozen of them. Mayor Loucks thinks the council should go back to standing committees as is done in Eugene under its managerial form. Franzen does not agree with him.

Franzen Silent
"We are firmly for the managerial form of government," says Mayor Loucks, "but as we have it now we feel it's too much of a one-man government." He explained by saying the council would be more representative of the people if it had standing committees and that council members themselves would be closer to city problems.

City Manager Franzen presumably believes that city administration would be hampered rather than helped by the committee system.
Under the Salem city charter the council is a legislative and policy-making body, while administration and management of departments and finances are functions of the manager.
Under the state retirement plan the retirement age of public officials, after which they can continue in office only at the request of the municipalities employing them, has been changed from 65 to 72 years. Since Franzen was 65 the mayors have each year requested his remaining in office. The request, if he stays in office, will not be necessary again for four years.

Salem High to Play Prineville In District Finals

Salem high school's baseball team, champions of district 8 A-1, will meet Prineville, 8 A-2 champions, at 2 o'clock Saturday on the Prineville diamond, with the winner to gain a berth in the state Class A baseball tournament at Albany the following week-end.

Arrangements for the district 8 playoffs were made Monday in a telephone conversation between Prineville Principal Wilfred Burgess and Salem high school Athletic Director Vern Gilmore.

Similar playoffs between A-1 and A-2 champions will be conducted in the other seven districts throughout the state next week-end.

A-1 schools are those with 500 or more students, while A-2 schools have from 150 to 499 students. A-1 and A-2 schools conduct their own eliminations during the seasons, then the district champions in each division play each other to determine that district's representation in the state tournament.

The state tournament will be May 21, 22 and 23 at Albany.

Shah's Private Estate Given to Government

Tehran, Iran (AP) — A royal decree announced Monday the transfer of the Shah's privately-held estates to the government of Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

This is another victory for Mossadegh in his campaign to bring the royal court under complete government domination.
The payment specified is 60 million rials—about two million dollars at the official rate, or $800,000 at the current unofficial rate. The money will be spent on charities by the Royal Institute for Social Services, but the funds will be under government supervision.

The decree was the first substantial result of the "accord" established between Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and the Mossadegh regime after clashes in March.

These clashes were followed by the resignation last month of Hussein Ala, veteran Iranian diplomat, as the Shah's chief court minister. Ala, a powerful prop of the monarchy against Mossadegh's dictatorship, had been accused by the Nationalists of being a central figure in "intrigues" against Mossadegh.

The Shah's beautiful 21-year-old wife, Queen Soroya, is in Rome. The royal court announced she had gone there for medical treatment. Rome advisers said she has shown no signs of illness, and speculation there was she left Tehran at the urging of the Shah during his battle for power with Mossadegh.
