Split of Allies

A Russian reading his morning paper Thursday could not help but ask himself or his wife if Stalin's predictions are not beginning to come true. Moscow's two biggest papers, Pravda and Izvestia, devoted hundreds of words to the foreign policy speeches of Prime Minister Churchill and Labor Leader Clement Attlee in the British House of Commons.

Wednesday the papers gave a 600-word summary of Churchill's speech, but Thursday they really let loose the wordage, giving more space to their remarks than to anything any Englishman has said for several years.

It was certainly the fullest coverage of any parliamentary debate since the war's end, and Tas, commenting on the speeches, said they were evidence of "growing dissatisfaction with various aspects of United States policy."

FOURTH AIR FORCE CO SPEAKER

Anti-picketing

"Certain employer interests contend it legalizes a closed shop. Labor denies this and contends the closed shop is legal today in Oregon. These are legal points which the courts and not the governor should decide. The attorney general has held the bill to be constitutional."

"My solution is not law," the governor continued. "To veto this bill would mean that nothing could be accomplished or determined until the legislature met again. The problem needs to be settled. The legal questions need to be answered. I have concluded to sign the bill."

House Bill 663 was introduced in the house by Representatives Lee Ohmart of Salem, Russell Hudson of The Dalles, Robert Root of Medford and Senator Gene Brown of Grants Pass.

It was passed by the house April 1 by a vote of 37 to 21 with two members excused. The bill was read for the first time in the senate on April 2, and referred to the committee on labor and industries of which Senator Phil Brady of Portland, retired labor leader, was chairman. The bill was reported out of the committee with a do-pass recommendation and was approved by a vote of 20 to 10 after a motion to refer the bill to the committee with specific instructions to delete the section relating to jurisdictional strikes had been defeated by a tie vote.

The bill repeals Chapter 355, Oregon Laws, 1947, although much of the language of that law is embodied in House Bill 663.

Shortly after the final labor bill reached the senate, Governor Patterson submitted a bill drafted by Commissioner of Labor William Kimsey to the senate. The governor's bill was not satisfactory to the employers and apparently not to labor because it remained in committee and the house bill reported out.

Early in the session, employer interests had a bill introduced which contained sections more far-reaching than that in the bill enacted. So much opposition developed against this original labor bill, proponents of House Bill 663 decided to introduce the substitute bill which they felt met the situation satisfactorily.

Ships Flying

McCarthy called it "one of the most insulting speeches ever made in the legislative body of a recipient nation against an ally which has been pouring out her economic life blood for practically every nation on earth."

"It might be well to notify Mr Attlee that the days of treason and appeasement are past in America," McCarthy said. "There is a new day in America."

He demanded an explanation from British Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill for Attlee's speech and said Churchill "owes an apology to the American people, a frank statement whether he and his majority party agree with what Attlee said."

Outlet Road Scheduled - Construction of the Fisher road, paralleling the Salem bypass on the easterly side will be undertaken by the state highway commission, according to an agreement with the Marion country court. Cromwell was working out a $25 drunk fine when he fled. He was arrested Sunday on a drunk charge and fined in municipal court Monday morning.

The attitude of the board was favorable and it is possible that at least two courts may be built this summer. City Manager Franzen was asked to get an estimate of the cost of asphalt, a surrounding fence, nets, etc. It was thought the tennis clubs of the city might pay some of the cost.

Taken under advisement was a hard-surface winding bicycle trail, following in general the perimeter of Bush Pasture Park, starting and ending at the Soap Box Derby race course. Ray Stringham and a group urged the development.

It was recommended that the city manager go ahead with plans for a hard-surface pedestrian trail around the park, totaling a length of one and a half miles.

Also for that park a driveway from High street to the old Bush home, with turnout and parking space at the house, was considered, but held up for further information about plans of the Salem Art association for use of the house.

Joe Tompkins asked the board for advice on the construction of toilet facilities in South Village. The materials will be provided by the people of the vicinity. The city has seeded the 2 1/2-acre area according to agreement.

City Manager Franzen reported on estimates for resurfacing the tennis court in Kay park and it was recommended that he go ahead with that, and also with drainage installation. On this, as well as on other work involving expense, the city manager will first get the approval of the city council.

The Salem Horseshoe club is up against a cost of about $600 that may block the lighting of the courts in Bush Pasture Park. It is under advisement.

Education

However, the board of higher education, after once turning down the Anderson report, later adopted it and advocated its implementation by the bills in the legislature.

The governor also signed House Bill 252 which is designed to end the controversy which has been engendered between the board of higher education and the state civil service over civil service certification of employes of the board.

Under the terms of the bill academic personnel of the board is exempted from civil service. The bill contains a list of staff members who are to be included in civil classification and provides in the event of any further disagreement between the two agencies the governor is to be the final arbiter.

Kessler

Comparing the strength of Red military machine with that of the Western world he said the Reds have more than 200 well-equipped and well-trained ground divisions, backed by air and naval support with more than five million more under arms and an estimated ten million men that could be mustered. In addition to this he listed the Soviet Union's having atomic weapons and being able to produce five times as many planes as the United States, and even now equalling its output.

The Soviet Union, he warned, is second only to the U.S. in industrial power and resources, "and behind the Red military might a nation of slave laborers and cowed citizens forced to strain every muscle to turn out weapons and strategic material."

But he added that despite their strong resources to defend their way of life the Russians had no very desirable way of life to defend.

Opposing the Red's power the general listed the masses might of the free world, the fine military equipment, a strong navy and superior training.

Kessler acknowledged that "we are outweighed in manpower, but it was not necessarily the biggest force that was the best." He stressed the importance of the reserve program, reminding that it has played an important part in Korea with nearly 750,000 reservists and National Guardsmen called to the colors in the first year alone.

The speaker pointed to the economy factor in the maintaining of a strong reserve force which augments the regular forces in times of threatened danger.

"Through our reserve program and through our general expansion of military forces we are building up our power for peace constantly," he told the group at the luncheon.

In closing the general said, "We are building our power - this power composed of our military strength, our industrial economy, our allies and our own system of government." Then quoting President Eisenhower's statement, "There is no problem 160 million people working together cannot lick," he added.

"I believe that, and by your actions, I know you share that belief. All of us, working together with our fellow Americans can and will continue to keep America powerful, prosperous and free."

The speaker was introduced by Dean Seward Reese of Willamette University and presiding at the luncheon was Mayor Al Loucks. Among the others at the speaker's table were Gov. Paul L. Patterson, Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Rilea, Russel E. Pratt, Maj. Wilfred Schaplow and the commanders of reserve components in Salem.

Invocation was by the Rev. John Reedy, retired army chaplain. The colors were presented by a color guard including Air Force Sgt. Robert C. Hartman, Navy Yeoman Bruce Calry, Marine Corps Sgt. Wm. R. Kitchen and National Guard Sgt. Lawrence Baker.

The Willamette ROTC band played "The Star Spangled Banner" at the beginning of the program, which included brief remarks by Governor Patterson, who declared "the people of Oregon are grateful to you of the armed forces."

General Kessler paid a short tribute to Salem, which he had visited once before, and to the west coast, which he said that as an easterner he had found more enthusiastic and more interested in national and international problems than his own section.

Approximately 400 persons attended the affair and ate box lunches which they were furnished as they entered. General Kessler's address will be broadcast by KOCO at 5 p.m. today.
