To Kiss, or Kill

By DAY KEELE

The story was as bad. In the reporter's opinion, he was a louid mouthed. Enow-it-all wise guy, who had allowed his ring ability and a fortunate marriage to a wealthy girl to go to his head. He was an ingrate with a swollen ego, who thought he was above the law. For some reason, Joe had a knife in him. More, he was twisting it. It was the reporter's opinion, under Joe's by-line, that he had been legally same when he had invited Cherry Marvin to his hotel for a party and killed her with a blow of the fist that had compiled forty -two consecutive kneckouts.

He lay back on the bunk and put the newspaper over his eyes. Then high heels clicked on the cement and a turnkey said, "A dame to see you, Barnay."

Mandell got to his feet. He hoped it was Gale. It wasn't. It was Rosemary.

She gave the suit box she was carrying to the turnkey. "Some clean clothes for Barnay, With Inspector Carition's permission." Then she squeezed both hands in between the bars. "Hello, Barney."

Mandell held her hands, thinking how pretty she was in her nurse's white uniform and redlined blue cape. And she was still the same good sport, still just the gir next door. No beef. No tears. No "Why did you do it?"

"How's Ma?" he asked her.

"Fine." Rosemary said. "Just the girl next door. No beef. No tears. No "Why did you do it?"

"Toon't believe you killed that girl. I don't believe you wand seeing and hearing

CHAPTER 5

The room phose rang. Still smiling. Rose lifted it from the cracke. Then looked at Inspector Cariton. Long-distance. Eagle River calling Mandell. That's where the Ebbling summer looks where the Ebbling summer looks is the cartier in which Mandell was stilling. Tet him take it.

"Barney, my boy." Attorney Ebbling's Harvard drawl sounded thin and far away, as if he had a bad connection. The bear trying to get you for hours. And I cart'tell you how nice it is to hear your voice.

"It's nice to hear you." Mandell said.

"It's nice to hear you." Mandell said.

"It's nice to hear you." Mandell said.

"Not there?" Attorney Ebbling me And it was all in my mind, see? Gale store it eyen while you have not there as last as she could. Now let me said as she could and there are said as she could as she could as she should have roughed form his fand. Lieuten the said could far the shoulders sagged, then his whole body. "Put 'em on," the turnkey said.
"They want you downstairs again."
Mandell dressed, wondering why, as pretty and smart as she was. Rosemary had taken up nursing instead of getting married.
