

RAIN DAMPENED CORNERSTONE CEREMONIES

Only a few of the hundreds invited to attend cornerstone ceremonies for the new wing of Salem General hospital were in attendance Saturday afternoon because of heavy rain. Shown at the extreme left in this photograph is Grace Taylor, among first graduate nurses from the hospital, near the extreme right stands George Putnam (with umbrella) who has been an ardent supporter of the hospital for many years.

CORNERSTONE PLACED FOR NEW HOSPITAL WING

Milton Meyers, long associated with development of Salem General hospital and honorary president of the hospital board, stands ready with mortar and trowel to officially lay the cornerstone for the new, $975,000 wing. At left moving the cornerstone into position for laying is William Probst, superintendent for Ross Hammond Corp., general construction contractors. At the right is James L. Payne, Salem architect, who designed the structure.

The atomic cloud rose very swiftly to a height of 10,000 feet in a little over a minute. When it reached a height of from 20,000 to 25,000 feet it was supposed to be pierced by two QF-80 jet planes flying test missions, but that phase of the test was cancelled due to unfavorable surface winds at nearby Indian Springs Air Force Base. Other planes in the air included 12 B-36 bombers.

The AP crew, in a Stinson single-engine cabin plane, was able to fly within 15 air miles of the target area. The target area consisted mainly of a long row of trees perhaps 50 feet high, behind which were hidden many of the 15 railroad cars and various types of military housing. From the air it appeared other cars and trees were scattered distances of perhaps a mile or two from ground zero.

The fireball lasted perhaps eight seconds. The blast seemed to kick up less dirt than many previous atomic explosions at the Nevada proving grounds. This was perhaps because of the comparatively high burst for a medium power weapon.

The customary column and mushroom formed quickly and a brisk wind soon stretched the cloud in a zig-zag fashion across the sky. The mushroom portion had broken away completely from the column by the time the AP observer plane landed at 8:55 a.m. Two long gray streaks were discernible in the distant sky.

"It would be sad to restrict it now," he said. West Stream Necessity Herbert G. West of Walla Walla, representing the Inland Waterways Association, said the maximum power development of the Columbia and Snake Rivers is necessary for the future progress of the Northwest.

The area already is experiencing a power shortage, he said, "but it will be even more severe unless new projects are started."

James Hill Jr., also representing Inland Waterways, said it is imperative that work be started on the Ice Harbor Dam on the Snake River. Truman budgeted $4,900,000 for that work, but the Eisenhower budget eliminated the item.

In addition to power, he said, the Ice Harbor project would enable sea-going barges to go up stream as far as Lewiston, Idaho.

Lester F. King, speaking for Western wheat growers, said grain men need the Snake River development for transportation. And, he added, it is important for irrigation and power purposes.

John W. Shepard said the Ice Harbor dam should be started at once for both its navigation and power potentialities.

William Hagan, representing the Fish and Wildlife Service, asked adequate funds for fisheries development on the lower Columbia River.

Richard Rawlinson of Salem is the new president of the Oregon State Laundry Owners Association. Others elected Saturday at the close of the organization's two-day convention in Medford included Russell Marshall, Klamath Falls, vice president. Directors include Bert Farris, Bend; Van Wiedler, Salem; and Linn Hughes, Astoria.

Open Bids on Meters—Bids on 300 new parking meters for the city streets will be opened in the office of City Manager J. L. Franzen Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Invitations to bid have been sent to nine parking meter companies.

Stone Laid at New Hospital

The new Salem General Hospital will stand as a monument to man's humanity to man, Milton L. Meyers, honorary president of the hospital board, told an audience Saturday afternoon as he placed the cornerstone of the new building off Center street, near the present hospital building.

Meyers was assisted in laying the stone by James L. Payne, architect, and William Probst of Portland, superintendent for the Ross B. Hammond company, contractors. Meyers told the history of the hospital. He said the new hospital is the climax of effort extending over a period of years, and the faith, labor and cooperation of many citizens.

The brief program was opened with an invocation by Rev. George H. Swift, rector of St. Paul's. Mayor Al Loucks and County Judge Rex Hartley spoke on the relation between municipalities and hospitals.

Rev. Paul N. Polling of the First Presbyterian church gave the benediction. C. W. Paulus, vice president of the board of directors, presided.

Although the ceremonies were under cover attendance was reduced by rain. Most board members were present. William L. Phillips, president

Rosenbergs

The Rosenbergs had been scheduled to die the week of March 9. The Justice Department presumably will ask U. S. District Judge Irving R. Kaufman in New York to fix a new execution time.

Court vote was 7 to 2. The Supreme Court's vote on the Rosenberg's third appeal was 7-2. Justice Black and Douglas favored hearing the case.

Last Nov. 17 when the court acted on their first appeal, Justice Black alone dissented. On the second vote in the case, Black again was the only one who favored hearing the appeal.

In other actions Monday the high tribunal: Upheld Piacayne Co. 1. Decided 5-4 that The New Orleans Time-Picayune Publishing Co. did not violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by requiring classified and national advertisers to buy space in both its morning and afternoon newspapers.

The Justice Department had contended this was a "forced" rate method unfair to The New Orleans Item, a competing afternoon paper.

1. Agreed to say whether organized baseball's "reserve clause" controls violate the anti-trust laws. The court accepted three appeals, including one by George Earl Toolson, a former New York Yankee farm club player who sought damages because he was placed on the ineligible list and has been unable to play professional ball since 1950.

Negro Wins Appeal The other cases involve Walter J. Kowalski, New York City player who was the baseball property of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Jack Corbett and The El Paso Texas Baseball Club, Inc.

2. Set aside 9-0 the death sentence rape conviction of James Avery, a Georgia Negro who complained that names of prospective white and Negro jurors for his trial were printed on different colors and that the jury which convicted him was composed only of white persons.

3. Set aside 8-0 the death sentence rape conviction of James Avery, a Georgia Negro who complained that names of prospective white and Negro jurors for his trial were printed on different colors and that the jury which convicted him was composed only of white persons.

Martin said the wheat loan would cut down the U. S. surplus and at the same time give aid to a deserving country. In reply to a question, Martin said price details had not been worked out. Knowland added that the transaction would be handled by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

providing the Japanese Government. Martin said the program is similar to one carried out by the Government of England. It is "not an unusual program" several heavy bills to cut the 25, 251-7.

Congress' 30 Red Cross centers have trained 2000 first aid instructors, and as nursing aides. The centers collected 78,819 units of blood. Handstrom said the Red Cross is prepared to take a big part in coping with any war disaster or other emergency.

The Red Cross also has made surveys in the Portland area to find out how to feed and lodge persons who might be bombed out of their homes.
