

South Oregon Travel Lure

Southern Oregon, both east and west of the Cascades, has a wealth of attraction for the traveler, ranging from Pacific oceanic ocean beaches to scented sagebrush rangelands. East of the mountains lies the vast Klamath Basin where lumbering and farming are the way of life. Some of the biggest lumber mills in the nation can be seen at Klamath, whose potatoes are also world famous.

West of the Cascades and east of the Coast Range are the Rogue and Umpqua valleys and the modern cities of Medford, Grants Pass, Roseburg and Ashland where the best of accommodations can be found. In Southern Oregon will be found the gateways to Crater Lake on U. S. Highways 97 and 99.

Over on the coast are groves of majestic myrtle trees and miles of splendid coastal vistas. Beautiful the year round, it is especially attractive in summer.

Azaleas a Beautiful Sight on Coast Road

Tourists and citizens of Oregon who travel over the lower portion of U. S. Highway 101 on the Oregon coast during the spring should not miss the most beautiful sights imaginable, native azaleas in bloom in Azalea state park near Brookings, Oregon.

Some of these bushes are reputed to be more than 400 years old. The hundreds of native azaleas were discovered by the late Sam Boardman, who was the "father" of the Oregon park system, the land purchased by the state, and developed with roadways and picnic facilities to enable the visitors to enjoy the beauties of these native plants. Citizens of Brookings stage an azalea festival at the park in the latter part of May when the blooms are fully matured.

Salt Lake City (AP)—Marshall Dana of Portland, Ore., Saturday was appointed vice chairman of the Water Policy Committee of the National Reclamation Association.

Notre Dame's final football game of the 1953 season will be at home against Southern Methodist.
