AFTER THE BATTLE

The savage and heroic defense of a critical terrain hinge by Company B, U.S. 140th Tank Battalion, for fifteen hours against reinforced North Korean troops is reflected in the drawn and exhausted expressions of company commander Capt. Duane Doherty (left) of Geneva, N. Y., and battalion commander Col. Wm. Fondren of Memphis, Tenn. The isolated tankers who defied death against overwhelming numbers in the "Luke Castle" area on the eastern front, were relieved when ROK troops broke through in a counter-attack.
