Bernard Mainwaring, publisher of the Capital Journal, spoke to Korea, stating that the United States should refuse to return Formosa to Red China or admit that government to the U.N. in return for peace when the peace talks get under way this fall. He expressed the belief that the U. S. will have to keep a large army in Korea or Japan for a considerable time to discourage a renewal of the Communist attack on South Korea.

The East Salem Lions brought a stunt which had some of the host club puzzled for a time. They moved in a body, announcing that they were taking over and would conduct the meeting.

Wanted Man

the forged signature of Lester R. Thomas, company bookkeeper.

Police are still uncertain how Short got hold of the company's printed checks, but believe it was apparently by burglary. Several sheets of checks were removed from the center of a large checkbook so that the loss would not be discovered for some time. The amounts were printed on the checks with the company's own check writing machine and in some cases with a company typewriter. However, no burglary or entry was ever noticed or reported by the company.

Because of these facts, detectives at first suspected an inside job and checked out handwritings of all company employees with negative results.

The first break came at a quarterly meeting of check investigators at Tacoma, Washington, recently. When Olympia Police Captain H. V. Williamson casually mentioned to a Salem detective the arrest of a man in Texas for a similar check operation in Olympia.

He forwarded a picture of Short and samples of his handwriting to Salem where he was identified by a tavern owner as the person who cashed a check at his place. This identification and identification of the handwriting by a handwriting expert proved sufficient for the grand jury to return the secret indictment and the arrest followed.

Word from Olympia received Thursday was that Short had obtained an attorney and would refuse to waive extradition.

District Attorney Kenneth Brown said extradition proceedings would begin against Short soon.

Water Study

Lack of a water code for western Oregon was cited by the governor as one of the many problems the committee would be faced with.

"Wells are being dug and subterranean water is being utilized without any control by the state. We take a page from the experience in California where large areas, formerly blessed with what seemed to be an ample water supply, are now arid and unproductive simply because there was no general plan of control," he said. Governor Patterson said that it was his hope that the committee would attack the problem as an Oregon one, and work out a plan for conservation of water resources now available and endeavor to correlate the many uses of water.

He cited the Montana water code as an excellent one to study, saying that he understood it was the most forward looking document that had yet come forth from any state.

The governor told members of the committee that he did not think that they could "lick the problem in the next 18 months but that he expected the committee to come up with some recommendations for consideration by the 1955 legislature.

Members of the committee are Lyle Watts, retired federal forester; LaSelle E. Coles, Prineville, manager of the Ochoco Irrigation project; J. W. Barney, city manager of Hillsboro and a member of the Willamette Valley Basin commission; Frank McCulloch, former state public utilities commissioner, now an attorney in Portland; Kenneth W. Sawyer, chairman of the agriculture committee of the Portland Chamber of Commerce; Gen. C. T. Beecher, retired marine corps general and J. D. Bennett of Ontario.

Food Relief

At the big Schoenberg City Hall station, 12,000 persons were in line by midmorning. At Wilmersdorf, 10,000 waited patiently in a drizzle. Similar scenes dotted all sectors of west West Berlin.

Hundreds stood through the night at Schoenberg. Extra crews were hired to help catch up with the demand. The food is taken from West Berlin's antilockdown reserves. It is being replaced by a 15 million dollar American gift shipped on President Eisenhower's orders to give relief to the needy despite Moscow's rejection.

A baby airlift is helping deliver the American shipments from the port of Hamburg.

House Entered — Burglars entered the home of Wilmer H. Page, 215 McGilchrist street, sometime during the past 10 days while the family was on vacation. Page reported to city police. Nothing appeared to be missing, he said.

Breakfast Precedes
He made his announcement after a conference of committee Republicans in Speaker Martin's office.

Eisenhower invited both Republicans and Democratic leaders to the White House for breakfast and, with Humphrey and Budget Director Joseph M. Dodge, went over the government's fiscal situation with them.

He asked no comment from them, and they left with the understanding they would consult among themselves and with other legislators at the capitol.

Series of Huddles
Back at the capitol, there was a quick series of huddles.

House leaders indicated willingness to take up the matter—figuring it would mean no more than a week's delay in adjournment of Congress.

Rep. Cooper (D., Tenn.) said there was an understanding the Ways and Means Committee would begin hearings on a bill Monday. Cooper is the ranking Democrat on the group.

The attitude of Senate leaders was less clear. Several influential senators are strongly opposed to lifting the debt ceiling, and the Senate's rules permit unlimited debate.

Sen. Knowland (Calif.), acting Republican leader, hinted Congress may not meet its Saturday adjournment deadline because of "recent developments."

All Soldiers

Allied soldiers—Americans, South Koreans and other troops of 13 other lands—started leaving the battle line shortly after the truce was signed Monday morning. The guns fell silent Monday night.

Colums of soldiers walked down from hills that had brought in blood—from battle-torn areas halfway between the present and history:

Hearbreak Ridge... White Horse Mountain... Old Baldy... PorkChop Hill... The Hook... and the outposts—Vegas, Harry, Berlin and East Berlin...

Going to the hills they creep along under blazing Red guns in the infantryman's wary, crouching walk.

When they came down they walked upright, with no shells to fear.

Almost all fortifications were destroyed. Bunkers were caved in and trenches filled. Timbers were salvaged where possible.

Across no-man's land, front-line officers reported the Chinese and North Koreans were sometimes using pack mules to get their equipment out.

Lemmon Sells To McKay Firm

Purchase by the Douglas McKay Chevrolet company from Oral M. Lemmon on the southeast corner of the Union and North Commercial street intersection was revealed when the transaction was registered with the county recorder.

Revenue stamps indicate the purchase price was $39,000.

The Lemmon property has frontage on Commercial and Union streets and contains a frame structure in which a grocery store has been operated for a number of years. Lemmon has been disposing of his stock in recent weeks and expects to vacate the property by the first of August.

The purchase means that the McKay Chevrolet company owns all of the frontage on the east side of Commercial street between Marion and Union and now has in its possession all of the half block except a small tract on Union street adjacent to the alley.

The company plans to move its used car operations to the new property. Beyond that improvements will depend upon business demands.

Hospital Patient Jumps From Window

A 51-year-old man suffered a broken collar bone, a broken rib and numerous lacerations when he jumped from a second floor window of a Salem hospital about 1 a.m. Thursday.

Police, who were called to help restrain the man as he struggled with nurses who were trying to return him to the hospital, said the man told them he jumped because he thought the nurses were going to take his watch away from him.

He had been admitted to the hospital Wednesday evening with a bad hand laceration but was also an alcoholic, police reports said.

He was committed to Oregon State hospital for further treatment.
