Wife's Goal Money, Not Love, Charge

Albany — The woman he married July 11 at Corvallis disappeared in quick order, P. W. Storey alleges in a complaint filed in circuit court here, so Storey wants the union annulled.

The complainant alleges all his wife, Olive Greensman Storey, wanted, was his money and as soon as she had separated him from it she took and he hasn't seen her since.

Storey claims his wife persuaded him to give her the money both before and after their marriage, alleging she had been in an automobile accident and had a hospital bill and an attorney's fee to pay.

Both statements, he found later, to be false, Storey asserts. He asks that his wife's former name, Greensman, be restored to her.

Younger Boys Camp Closes

By ELLIS VON ESCHEN
(Camp Editor)

The final session for younger boys at Silver Creek closed with a model contest in the craft shop.

Tony Labbe of Portland, one of the camp governors, took first place with an MG sport car. Tied for second with model Jaguars were Jimmy Davenport and David Elliott. Taking third with two jeeps and a hot rod was Bill Bean.

The older boys (12 to 16 years old) have taken over camp now, and begun by electing officers from each of the four units. Hillside's governor is Jim Fortmiller from Salem, Bear Creek elected Bryce Noel of Portland, Hemlock's man is Charles Wilson of Eugene and Trickle Falls chose Wally Preble, Portland. These men are members of the Camper Council, which voices opinions as to what type of program it would like.

On the agenda for this first week are small unit trips for a day's swimming and fishing on the North Santiam, all-day fishing hikes to the North Fork of Silver Creek, an Olympic Games program and a water carnival. For some, parts of the first few days are being devoted to activity of

Salem Bridge Teams at Top

Salem duplicate bridge teams came out one-two in the fourth annual open pairs championship of the Elks Bridge club this week but they had to overcome the opposition of four tough partnerships from other towns.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Frasier were second when points were tallied, while the winners were Mrs. E. W. Kay and William F. Leary, former state champion. Twenty-two teams competed.

Teams placing included Mrs. Harold Peterson and Marian Andrews, Mrs. Lucille Wheeler (all of Portland) and Jack Shepard of Corvallis, Mrs. Myrtle Mount of Oregon City and Mrs. Gertrude Rowe of Canby, and Miss Louise Anderson and Charles Thomas, both of Portland. Local teams also awarded points included Mrs. Charles L. Newsum and Ellis H. Jones, Walter M. Cline and Jack Nielsen, Mrs. Walter A. Barach and Mrs. C. C. Gabriel, and Mrs. Paul F. Burris and Charles Tambling.

Liquor Leads To Court Fines

Lebanon — Pleading guilty to driving while under the influence of liquor, Ourinne Lila Bates of Lebanon was fined $150 in Judge Ruby Moore's city court. Her driver's license was suspended for 90 days.

Leonard Bolle was fined $20 after he admitted guilt to being drunk in an automobile; Alfred G. Bates, Lebanon, was fined $20 after pleading guilty to the same charge.

Also in Judge Moore's court Monday was John Allen Brown asking time to obtain counsel prior to his appearance on a charge of reckless driving. His hearing was set for 10:15 a.m. Thursday.

Judge Moore dismissed a charge of driving without an operator's license after Vernon W. Stricklin produced his license in court, but he was fined $15 after pleading guilty to violation of the basic rule.

Ponies and cattle run wild in the salt marshes of North Carolina's Outer Banks.

Small Beetles Held Dangerous

Nitidulid beetles may seriously reduce red clover seed yields, says Marion County Extension Agent Hollis Ottaway. These beetles are small, black and shiny; closely resembling common flea beetles.

Nitidulids feed within the clover florets, damage the blossoms and finally prevent seed formation. Since the beetles are down within the floret, they are not easily observed. If they are present, they can be seen, however, if the head is tapped into the palm of a hand, Ottaway points out.

Time of control will vary with the date of spring clipping. Elvis Dickason, Oregon State entomologist, indicates that early control may necessitate a second application later on. On the other hand if the field is sprayed or dusted when the heads are fully infested, one application should be adequate.

If one beetle is found per head, it is probably time to start control measures. It is expected that this period will occur within the next two weeks.

Ground dusters can be used applying twenty pounds of ten percent Toxaphene per acre. Both ground and airplane sprayers have been giving fair

Forest Spraying Work Terminated

Lebanon — Since July 10, 79,237 acres of Linn county forests have been sprayed for spruce budworm. The final operation was completed Monday when pilots of the Bowler Air Service of Orofino, Idaho, sprayed the last 1,351 acres.

This year's program has been directed by Al Weiner of the Eugene headquarters of the

Lowell Mill Hit by Fire

Lowell, Ore. (P)—The Butte Lumber company mill here was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin Tuesday night.

Electricity to a large section of the town was cut off when the Mountain States Power Co. cut power lines which for a time threatened to fall on crews fighting the blaze.

Equipment and men from Springfield, East Lane Fire Protection district, Lookout Point Dam and the forest service were called to the fire.

A large quantity of stacked lumber also was destroyed.

Owners of the mill, Glen Younger, George Brewer and Ray Grube, said it was partly insured. It employed 35 persons during normal operations.

Special Attention For Feeder Lambs

Feeder lambs on irrigated pasture will need special attention if top gain are to be made. One important step is in pasture management. Thirty days are required for most sheep worms to complete their life cycle on the soil and re-infest another sheep.

Usually moving to new pastures at least every 28 days breaks this cycle and sunshine and fresh air will clean up many of the parasites. Feeders may use many small pastures but the important fact is not to return to a pasture for over 40 days. This long interval has led some operators to alternate sheep with cattle on their pastures.

County Extension Agent Ben A. Newell suggests a thorough job of worming before feeder lambs go into irrigated pastures and constant use of phenothiazine and salt. This material can be purchased or mixed at home. One part PTZ and 9 parts salt by weight.

PLAN TURNER BUILDING

Turner — The Turner Community building board of directors met Monday night and made plans for an auction sale to be held in August. The proceeds from this sale would go toward the building fund. The date and place will be announced later. Some committees were appointed by President Albert Jensen and more will be notified or announced later.

During a normal year, about six million enterprises in the United States hire labor at some time.
