LAST OF CENTER STREET BRIDGE STEEL

Marion Street

Bridge Accepted

The Marion street bridge in Salem was formally accepted Thursday by the state highway commission at the August meeting held in Portland.

With a few costs not yet tabulated, the Marion street bridge will cost somewhat less the $1,500,000. The steel furnished by the American Bridge company cost $261,634; the pier construction by Lee Hoffman, contractor, cost $258,567 and the approaches and other work on the bridge contracted to the General Construction company cost $863,400, or a total of $1,583,601.

Construction of the piers began on January 13, 1950 and

Lakeview Case

Ore., local.

It is an outgrowth of a long dispute between the Lakeview Creamery Co. and the union, which is trying to organize employes of the firm. The dispute drew state-wide attention after Lakeview townspeople unloaded beer June 2 from a truck over protest of its driver. The driver had turned away from the creamery because of picketing.
