

BLUE LAKE BEAN LINE

Come August 21, peak of the bean season for Blue Lake Packers, Inc., 376 Patterson street, West Salem, will see near 1500 persons employed at a plant where about 325 tons of beans will be processed daily. It is estimated that 85 member growers will deliver 7,000 tons of beans to Blue Lake this year. Top, left: Beans are now delivered to the plant in wooden boxes containing up to 1,100 pounds. Delivery in boxes rather than in bags results in an economy of space and greater efficiency in handling. Shown is a box being mechanically dumped as an initial step in plant processing. Lower, left: Shown here are women working on snipper inspection belts. A total of 27 snipping machines are on the bean line where about 13 tons are handled each hour. Top, right: No. 10 hand packed bean filler where bean cans are filled and weighed. Lower, right: Eight ounce continuous pressure cooker where beans are cooked by automatic machines operating at high temperature. From cookers they pass into a cooling chamber. Top: Frozen pack bean line where beans are packaged in containers of various sizes. From here they go into quick freeze rooms. Lower: Cans from the eight ounce continuous pressure cooker, removed from the cooling room, are cased by the machine shown in this picture.
