

Peg in Washington

BY ALENE (PEG) PHILLIPS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 10 Dear Marians Washingtonians are convinced that not only the President but also the First Lady is entitled to a vacation and thorough relaxation in Colorado. Those who have observed her schedule from inaugural time to the more recent weeks have marvelled at her ability to participate continuously in all types of activities. Undoubtedly she has relieved the President of some of the social demands of the office, as she has welcomed groups for whom time could not be found in his schedule of conferences during the opening months of the administration. Not only has she welcomed them officially to the White House but she has given them the warmth of a personal greeting that is a reflection of her great friendliness of spirit. No matter how long the line, she manages somehow to have an extra word or two for each that makes the introduction more than a simple "how-do-you." It is said that some of the other First Ladies have followed the technique of advancing each member of the line along quickly by taking the proffered hand and drawing the individual along so that there was no time to hesitate for an extra word. However, Mrs. Eisenhower seems to give an impression of not hurrying the line and of being sincerely interested in each one she meets. In addition to all of the official appearances the First Lady must make, the charitable organizations to which she devotes time, the visiting women's groups and young people's clubs that are given a welcome, she has managed to have some informal at home parties in the morning. When I read in your pages of the frequent "coffee" in Salem, I think of the name by which the British would call these morning at home "eleven-enses"—certainly a descriptive title. Someone told me in the spring when flowers were blooming in abundance that I should take a long look at them, as soon there would be no color at all. Consequently, I have been delighted to find that prediction not completely accurate. Of course, many householders don't take the time to raise summer flowers as it requires more effort. However, there are cannas, marigolds, gladiolas, salvia (earlier here than at home), varieties of daisies, geraniums, petunias—to mention those that come quickly to mind. One particular beautiful display is in front of the Naval Hospital, where the red of geraniums, and the white and nearly blue of petunias provide a patriotic foreground. We happened along by the hospital one evening just as the guard was stopping all cars on the driveway that circles through the grounds. Curiously we watched two officers and their aides cross the roadway and then discovered it was the hour for the flag to be lowered. One officer advanced to handle the ropes and the other stood at the rear with his eyes on the watch on his wrist. It seemed we waited several minutes before the latter called the signal but he was watching for the exact minute of sundown and when it arrived the ceremony was executed with dispatch. The Naval Hospital is an impressive building with its modified skyscraper architecture. One cannot see it, however, without thinking of the tragic end of the Forrestal career. It wouldn't do to end on a sad note, which gives me an excuse to tell you of the little white lion statues on the balustrade of the porch above on a third floor balcony of the brick house next door to my apartment. So small in size for outdoor ornamentation, but the thing that strikes me every time I see them is that they are neither couchant or rampant—they are haunchant. If you don't find that word in the dictionary, you might substitute rampant for rampant.—Yours with tongue in cheek. Peg.

Some Notations .. Party for Miss Majek

School days are not far away and already there are social activities for the young folk planning to go away for college this next year. Miss Louise Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Worth, and Miss Beverly Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Couper, are two Salem girls who will be attending Mills college in California this fall. The two have received invitations to attend a swim and picnic party planned for next Monday evening by the Portland Alumnae club of Mills college, the party to be at the home of Mrs. Guy Neelys on Palisades Terrace at Oswego. The affair is arranged between 5:30 and 9 o'clock. Attending as special guests will be the girls entering this fall, also those already students at the college. Miss Bell will be a junior at Mills, receiving another $500 scholarship for the year. Miss Owens will be a freshman. From now on, too, much planning is going on for the new school year by the large group of Salem girls planning to attend University of Oregon or Oregon State college. An interesting visitor in the capital is Mrs. Hugh Moore of Muncie, Ind., a long-time friend of Mrs. Sidney B. Lewis. Mrs. Moore was greeted by a group of Salem friends of Mrs. Lewis at a charmingly arranged tea at the Lewis home on Lane Place, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Moore is here for a week's visit. The tea table was an especially beautifully arranged one. It was covered with a handsome white embroidered, lace edged cloth. The centerpiece was an arrangement of pink carnations and roses, purple asters and stock. The same shades of pink and purple featured the bouquet on the buffet with pale pink tapers in silver holders at either side. The Lewis home was a cool retreat from the blazing sun outside. Admired by guests were the colorful begonias lining the walk to the front door. A delightfully informal gathering Thursday afternoon was the party for which Mrs. Robert E. Corey and her sister, Mrs. D. W. Richardson, were hostesses at the Corey home on

Visitors Stop

Silverton—Mrs. George Beebe, her two sons and daughter, George Jr., Bruce and Kathy, of Sunland, a suburb of Los Angeles, were guests of the F. M. Powells Wednesday. The visitors were overnight guests at the Independence home of the Marshall Powells. Completing their summer vacation the Beebes plan to spend some time with relatives in Sedro Wooley, Wash., and Seattle, where George Beebe plans to join them, coming by plane from southern California, and from there they will visit places of interest in western Canada. The family plan a longer stay with Silverton friends on their return trip to their home. Tonight the Decaturs are entertaining at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Bain, Mr. and Mrs. John Banloh, and Mr. and Mrs. David Weatherbee, Dave, Jr., and Sally. North 23rd. 'Twas just as the clever invitations said it would be, an ice cream social, and what a perfect afternoon for ice cream. No coffee, tea or punch, but ice cream—either as plain ice cream, sundaes or root beer floats—and did the guests enjoy it on the warm afternoon it turned out to be! The "soda fountain" was set up on the patio, each guest ordering her choice then relaxing to enjoy it in the gardens or in the house. Certainly the grown-ups were the envy of the young fry in the neighborhood, considering the ice cream treats. Carrying out the theme of the invitations—which were in the shape of ice cream cones—were the decorations. On the front door was a large ice cream with a peppermint strip of "Hi" above. On the mantel in the living room were colored straws in an ice cream container with little ice cream men at either side. For the group attending it was a "hit" party of the season.
