Top, left: Turner road overpass, now standing alone like some classical monument, will join the S. P. overpass when earth now being moved from Bartosz completes the fill between the two viaducts. Lower, left: Ten yard "can" used by Roy Houck, Jr., prime contractor for this section of the by-pass to move about 165,000 yards of earth from Bartosz hill to complete a by-pass fill to Mill creek overflow. Top, right: Grader working in a new nine tenth mile realignment of Turner road that passes beneath the overpass. Lower, right: See the train roll. New overpass spanning S. P. track may become a mecca for railroad photographers because of picture possibilities offered here by track curvature.

GI Loan Papers Lead Man To Reunion With Mother

Donald — Walter Aldridge, high school teacher and athletic coach at North Marion Union high school, little realized when he made out his application for a GI loan to purchase his home in Donald that he was going to be united with his mother, Mrs. Carson, who lost him 30 years ago.

It was after the war when he sought a GI loan, and the government asked family statistics that started him searching through old records and questioning former neighbors in an effort to find his real mother.

Mrs. Carson had six children of her own and adopted another boy. However, sorrow and trouble caused her to suffer a nervous breakdown in Independence, Ore., in 1923.

The children were supposed to be put in a private home until she regained her health. Instead, her little boy, Waldo, was put out for adoption. When she went to pick up her children a year later, having regained her health, she couldn't find any trace of him. She and her family moved to Oakland, Calif., and she reared the family by working as a seamstress.

Waldo, who became Walter to his new parents, grew up, went to college, served in the Army in World War II and later became a school teacher.

Mother and son began corresponding about three months ago, then Walter, his wife and two children, Irene, 5, and Rhonda, a year old, went to Oakland and saw his mother for the first time in 30 years. He also saw his two sisters, Mrs. Josephine Avery of Alameda, Calif., and Mrs. Ruby Bachelder of Point Richmond, Calif., and his brother, Eugene Carson, San Leandro, Calif.

The adopted son, Roger Logan Carson, disappeared five years ago and two other children have died. Mrs. Carson now has 13 grandchildren "since I found these two."

Mr. Aldridge purchased a home in Donald this summer from Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kruse. At present he is working for the Donald Co-op, but will resume his teaching and coaching work at North Marion Union high school, Sept. 14.

At issue is a Guild demand for a 7.8 per cent pay increase. The Times has offered increases ranging from 3.5 to 5.88 per cent. Some 250 Guildsmen are on strike, idling 450 other Times employes.

Times-Guild Reopen Parley

Seattle (AP) — The Seattle Times and the American Newspaper Guild CIO Monday agreed each to appoint three-man committees to seek re-open negotiations on a contract dispute that has closed down the Times since July 16.

The Guild Times unit, in a membership meeting, passed a resolution proposing the move. The Times, informed of the Guild proposal, said it would be "pleased" to go along.

Federal Court Returns Case

Portland (AP) — An attempt to transfer a case from the Marion County Circuit Court to a federal court was turned by Federal Judge Gus Solomon Monday.

The case was that of Gerald T. Macomber, seeking release from prison on grounds he was forced to plead guilty and that he had been denied certain civil rights.

Macomber was sentenced to life imprisonment from Jackson County in 1950 on an assault conviction. He was arrested after an extended hunt that attracted wide attention.

The state attorney general's office had attempted to hand the case over to the federal court. But Judge Solomon said the state courts were able to handle it.
