Rules Deschutes Not Entitled to Tax

State Tax Commissioner Carl W. Chambers wrote Deschutes County Assessor Leslie M. Ross today that his investigation of the Midstate Electric Cooperative at Lapine, Ore., showed the firm had transacted its business in Klamath county and therefore Deschutes county was entitled to no share of the two per cent gross revenue the co-op pays in lieu of taxes.

Although the cooperative's headquarters are in Deschutes county, at Lapine, Chambers said his inspection tour indicated that the cooperative did all its business in Klamath county.

One Convict

But the warden said that because of inadequate supervision both liquor and narcotics are being smuggled into the prison and frankly told the board members that he had not yet been able to put a stop to this practice, because he doesn't have enough men to cover the prison.

Referring back to conditions he found upon taking over the prison Warden Gladden said that he was amazed to find that convicts controlled the leather industry at the prison.

"The convicts purchased the leather, then distributed perhaps at a price, to other convicts, who used it to manufacture leather novelties. It was a fine business for them," he said.

"Why last Christmas the convicts stole 11 turkeys," Gladden said.

"Theft was rampant all over the prison," Gladden said. "The convicts stole sugar out of the dining room and the cannery. They stole the best cuts of meat out of the commissary and smuggled it out, leaving only the poorer cuts for the inmates in the main line."

And that was the reason he said so much trouble occurred in the prison. Turnover of prison personnel, he said, has been heavy but declared he was hopeful that once things are straightened out in the prison, guards will be more satisfied with their jobs and remain in the employ of the prison.

Guards Paid Well
"I have checked up and find that we are paying our guards a wage comparable to that paid in other prisons and it is likewise comparable to the wages paid guards in federal prisons," Gladden said.

The warden said that work on the new segregation building, now being handled by a private contractor, is going along well, and said its completion will solve some of the trouble existing at the penitentiary at the present time.

Gladden came out of retirement from the federal prison service last spring when the state board of control fired Warden Virgil O'Malley on the charge he had let things at the prison get out of hand.

The new warden quelled a revolt last month by isolating the prisoners in the baseball yard until the ringleaders surrendered.

rendered, 120 of the leaders and their associates were placed in solitary confinement.

The state board of control requested an allocation from the emergency fund of $138,058 for 25 new guards and $7,870 for general operating and maintenance. Members of the emergency board had not acted upon the request up to noon Friday, deferring final action until they had heard requests from other state agencies first.

With their fight and defiance apparently gone, they stood about the yard where the only comfort came from a small fire on which wood from the athletic field bleachers burned.

Cause a Mystery
Guards, state patrolmen and other hurriedly recruited law enforcement officers waited orders to start herding the men back into their cells, which were being searched for any possible hidden weapons.

The cause of the outbreak remained a mystery and amount of damage was unknown.

Harold D. Van Eaton, state superintendent of institutions, estimated damage to the exterior of the buildings was $150,000 to $200,000, but he said the loss in equipment such as in the powerhouse, was undetermined.

Van Eaton said he thought there might be three contributing causes: an effort by some to escape; an attempt to embarrass authorities, and "some times there is the same carnival spirit in penal institutions that you have in universities."

Equipment destroyed by the rioters included a new $2,500 X-ray machine and a new dental chair.

Two shots were fired by guards Friday morning to convince the inmates they should get out of a burned building and stay in the open.

Bill Alexander, a repairman at the institution, slipped inside the walls during the morning to shut off water mains in one of the damaged buildings.

90 and 9 Men—The 90 and 9 Men of the North Willamette district will meet at the Court Street Christian church, Court and 17th streets, at 6:30 p.m. Monday, August 24. The program will consist of a dinner, a motion picture and Howard Cole as speaker.

Grunewald III From Gas Fumes

Jersey City, N. J. (AP)—Henry The Dutchman Grunewald, the Washington mystery man, and a woman companion were found half-clothed and overcome by gas fumes on a couch in a three room Jersey City apartment today.

Grunewald was taken to Jersey City medical center on an ambulance stretcher, but later was reported in "satisfactory" condition.

The woman, described as attractive, was identified by police as Ann Anderson, 46, Catonsville, Md., who moved into the apartment early yesterday from a nearby hotel. She was revived in the apartment and taken to the hospital for observation.

Police said two burners on a gas stove were turned on, but a window was open, which probably saved their lives.

Grunewald was identified almost immediately through papers in his pocket.

Power Rates

"Ordinarily, we will presume that the regulatory bodies of the states concerned will adequately protect the customers of these utilities," McKay explained, "but it is conceivable that, in some instances, there may not be adequate regulation, and in that event we want some recourse to avoid excessive resale rates."

McKay told the members of the club that as long as he was secretary, he would actively plan and recommend construction of reclamation facilities. Such plans, he pointed out, would include facilities for generating electric energy where economically feasible and justified.

"We will also plan single purpose projects that are necessary for the economy of any part of the country and which cannot be provided by local, public or private enterprise," he said.

Obviously hitting at critics of the department's recently announced power policy statement, McKay told the members of the Commonwealth club that "he does not assume that he has the exclusive right or responsibility for the construction of dams or the generation, transmission and sale of electric energy in any area, basin or region."

"We will not oppose the construction of any power facilities that local interests, either public or private, are willing and able to provide when these facilities are in accord with the best development of the natural resources of the area," he asserted.

Only a Partner
"I would like to reiterate, as I have many times in the past," he continued, that the department of the interior is but one of several partners, interested and responsible for the full development of the natural resources of the country.

"We are partner along with the state and local communities and private citizens. No one of these partners, least of all the federal government, should have a monopoly in the development of these resources. In fact, the task is so tremendous that it will require the active and cooperative efforts of all of us if the nation is to keep abreast of its needs," McKay said.

Preference Remains
Continuation of preference contracts for power sold to public agencies and farm cooperatives was assured by McKay who added that while the department did not favor disposing of power directly to large industries present contracts with such industries will be protected and be renewed when not in conflict with preference customers.

McKay said he was determined that the department shall sell its electric power at rates which are as low as possible but which he said do not violate sound business principles. Review of rates for which the department sells power should, McKay thought, be reviewed at relatively frequent intervals "and certainly not less than every five years."

"It is only good business and certainly it is standard operating procedure for other utilities to review their rates at frequent intervals," he pointed out.

"I believe this should be our policy and propose to follow it," McKay declared.

Loader Purchased—The Marion county court awarded the Nelson Equipment company of Portland the contract for providing the county with a front end loading machine. It will be used in connection with road work and the bid price was $13,200. The concern will accept an old loader as $1200 toward the purchase price.
