Stengel, Dressen Already Plotting Series Strategy

By JOHN GRIFFIN

New York U.S._They won't talk about it publicly, of course because there's that lit-tic matter of pennant-clinch-ing to be taken care of firstbut Managers Casey Stengel of the Yankees and Charley Dres-sen of the Dodgers already are plotting World Series strategy. That means both teams have their ace scouts watching each other, and both skippers are figuring out pitching plans and batting orders.

It seems fairly safe for Stengel and Dressen to start mak-ing series plans today, because only a basebell earthquake now can prevent the two teams from colliding in the fall classic for the fourth time in the last seven years.

Nine Ahead

As the Dodgers open an 11game home stand, they're nine games ahead of second-place Milwaukee, while the Yankees open their last western road swing with an 8½ game edge on the second-place White Sox.

USC Plans to Use Two Benches

San Francisco (4) — Jesse Hill, football coach at University of Southern California, has a plan to keep accurate track of substitutions under the college game's "one platoon" rule. He'll have two benches on the sidelines. As a player comes off the field, he'll be sent to the "been in" bench — which will be cleared 11 minutes into Chemeketa and each quarter, when free sub-stitutions will be legal.
