A REAL GOOD TIME

Plan Your Parties so Guests Anticipate Them

Have you ever thought of giving a party at which people just have a good time? Some entertainments often are anything but entertaining. Crowded rooms in which people stand elbow to elbow shouting to make themselves heard. Stuffy smoke-charged atmosphere. Feet that ache and fingers that grow cramped balancing too many things. Under such arrangements, hostesses may well exclaim afterwards: "Thank - heaven - that's - done - for - another - year!"

But you might like to consider a system that will cause your friends to say: "Thank - heaven - I'm - invited - to - the - Smiths - again."

Invite only as many people as you can seat comfortably. Arrange your chairs - three to six in a group - around a table or small stand of several end tables. You can seat one group around the living room coffee table, another around the sofa, a third around the dining room table, a fourth around a card table in the hall. You will need to give some thought to be sure that the chairs are grouped attractively, that every invited guest will have a comfortable place to sit and that each will have a place to set a glass or cup, without reaching far.

As each guest arrives, you can draw him to the group which you think he will find most congenial and introduce him to the others in it.

It's a good idea to have all the refreshments on one big buffet table or tea table, well-staffed for service and made as glittering and beautiful - or as simple and colorful - as you like. You can call your guests' attention to it, after they have found their places in the room, and let them go to the table and choose what they like. It's wise to have another member of the family take charge of this part of the party. Or, if you have servants enough, they can serve the guests.

Visit With Guests
It's best for you to keep circulating, in order to keep the guests well placed and to have a visit with everybody. You can encourage your guests to circulate too, if they

Simple Ways to Brighten Wardrobe

Here's an easy way to brighten and stretch your wardrobe. Make a colorful print dirndl to be worn over your favorite solid color "over skirt" yourself from a cool, light-weight printed fabric. Choose a print of silk or rayon whose predominating color accents the shade of your straight-cut sheath. Get two yards (or less, depending on the fullness preferred). Put a half-inch hem on each selvage. Figure at least an inch-wide waistband, with the same width band extending into a 24-inch long tie-sash. Double the waistband fabric, then tuck and stitch the print into a softly full skirt. Hem the bottom according to your regular dress length. Tie the colorful print dirndl around you, as you would an apron. The hemmed selvage edges should barely meet down the back.

Boehmer, Mrs. Elvin Hakason, Mrs. Gerald De Sart, Mrs. Forrest Shiply, Mrs. Howard Elwood, Mrs. Neil Boehmer, Mrs. Virgil Ekstrand, Mrs. William Howser, Mrs. John Howser.

Yellow gladioluses and blue delphiniums, and yellow and blue candles decorated the rooms. Pouring at the tea were Mrs. A. G. Dickinson, and Mrs. Rollin Hammett. Assisting about the rooms was Mrs. Wallace Turnidge.
