ies. Some pack Swiss chard, some like canned beet tops. Every year Blundell cans a variety of plums entirely un-known to the commercial pack. Comes. too, huckleberries and obscure fruits and vegetables that folks insist have a superior quality or flavor.

All are patrons and Blundell aims to please them. At the height of the season, however, he likes to have folks with small lots requiring specialized treatment to call for appointment. On Monday, when the Capital Journal man was at the Kanning Kitchen, a fellow from Santa Barbara, Calif, had just finished with a Bertan from Santa Barbara, Calif., had just finished with a Boysen-berry pack that about filled his station wagon.

When the season is over and Blundell closes his books for the year he discovers that the Kanning Kitchen has packed about 10,000 cases or 240,000 No. 2 and 2½ size cans. In addition to his custom pack, Blundell has a line of strawberry preserves, Willam ette red raspberries, Oregon loberry jam that are sold to pat-rons as a gift package consist-ing of the assor:ment.
