

Some Notations . . .

By M. L. F.

Mrs. Walter Norblad, wife of Congressman Norblad, was greeted by a large group of Salem friends through Wednesday and Thursday at the series of four informal coffees given in her honor by Mrs. Joseph B. Felton and Mrs. Peery T. Buren at the Felton home on Homestead road . . . The Norblads and their son, Albin, recently moved into their new home at the edge of Stayton to be there until time to return to Washington in the early winter . . .

Heralding the fact autumn is just around the corner were the beautiful decorations at the party . . . The coffee table was covered with a gay brown and white checked gingham cloth edged with lace, the cloth matching the doilies on the buffet and harmonizing with the decor of the charming dining room . . . The napkins matched the design in the wall paper . . . The centerpiece was a huge arrangement of bronze chrysanthemums and yellow gladioluses with big ornamental butterflies and colored leaves here and there among the blooms . . . Gladioluses in gorgeous shades of pink, lavender and reds, and white ones were arranged in bouquets elsewhere around the home . . .

During our call Wednesday morning, Mrs. Paul L. Patterson and Mrs. Charles E. Heltzel were at the urns . . . Mrs. Patterson is a busy lady these days accompanying Governor Patterson to the many annual fairs here and there about western Oregon . . . Assisting in greeting guests during this period were Mrs. Percy R. Kelly, Mrs. Charles A. Sprague, Mrs. Robert W. Fenix, Mrs. Lee Ohmart . . .

Among guests at the Wednesday morning affair was Mrs. William W. Bartle of Eugene, Congressman Norblad and Mr. Bartle, an attorney, having been law school friends at the University of Oregon . . . The Bartles are frequent visitors at the Norblad home during the time the Norblads are west . . . Among other guests during our call, Mrs. George Duncan, Mrs. James Allenby, Mrs. George A. Rhoten, Mrs. J. Ray Rhoten, Mrs. James T. Brand, Mrs. Harry V. Collins, Mrs. Kenneth Power, Mrs. Vern W. Miller, Mrs. Walter L. Toose, Mrs. Frederick S. Lampert, Mrs. Paul E. Hendricks, Mrs. A. W. Loucks, Mrs. Robert White, Mrs. John E. Caughell, Mrs. John H. Carson, Mrs. Wallace

Carson, Mrs. Allan G. Carson, Mrs. G. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Donald A. Young, Mrs. Edwin Keech, Mrs. Conrad Paulson . . .

Visitors greeted at lunch time yesterday included Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Kelly of Medford, who stopped to chat with Salem friends for a short time while en route to Portland; and Bishop Francis F. Leipzig of Baker, Ore., who was en route to Portland also from a trip to Eugene, where for many years he was pastor of St. Mary's parish before becoming bishop . . .

Dr. and Mrs. James McClintock left this week for their home in Madison, N. J., following a visit in Salem and in other cities in western Oregon . . . While here they visited Mrs. McClintock's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Fleisher, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gurnee Fleisher . . . The Gurnee Fleshers entertained Monday evening at an al-home to honor the McClintocks, guests including old friends who were at Willamette university when the McClintocks were . . . While in Oregon, the McClintocks also visited his mother, Mrs. James McClintock in Roseburg . . . En route east they are stopping at Walla Walla to visit Dr. and Mrs. Nat Beaver, also well known in Salem . . . Dr. McClintock is with Drew university . . .

Salem friends have received word that Ruby Scullen Phillips (Mrs. Daniel Phillips), Millwaukie and Corvallis, is the new public relations director for the Oregon Education Association, headquarters in Portland . . .

At the same time the association announced Mrs. Phillips' appointment it also released news of the naming of Edward Elliott of Umatilla as the new director of field service for the group . . . Mrs. Phillips was graduated from Oregon State college where she was active in journalism and worked on the Daily Barometer. She is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, Journalism honorary, Mortar Board, senior honor society, Sigma Kappa sorority and other groups . . . Since 1948 she has taught school at Millwaukie . . . In her new work, Mrs. Phillips will prepare news copy for the statewide organization of more than 10,000 teachers, and will maintain contact with teacher and community organizations throughout Oregon . . .

Pair Wed At Hopewell On Monday

Hopewell—In a candlelight ceremony at the Seventh Day Adventist church in Hopewell, Miss Marie Ruth Helen Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Newell of Newcastle, Wyoming, was wed to Melvin Warnock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Warnock of Hopewell, Monday evening, August 24 at 8 o'clock . . .

Elder G. E. Schaffner of Salem officiated. The church was decorated with pink and white gladioluses in tall baskets, and white tapers, which were lighted by Mrs. Kenneth Warnock of Salem wearing a yellow dotted Swiss dress with pink carnation corsage . . .

Stanley Warnock, brother of the bridegroom, played a trombone solo, accompanied by Mrs. Ursel Hallsted of Salem, who played the wedding music. Robert Clayville of Salem, soloist, sang . . .

The bride chose a pink suit with white accessories and white rose bouquet for her wedding . . .

The bride's cousin, Miss Irma Pfaff of Denver, Colo., was bridesmaid, wearing a light blue suit, with white accessories, and a pink carnation corsage . . .

James Bacchus, Jr., of McMinnville served as best man . . .

The bride's mother wore a black sheer dress with white accessories, and the bridegroom's mother chose a royal purple crepe dress with white accessories. Both wore white rose corsages . . .

The reception was at the Hopewell Evangelical United Brethren church immediately following the ceremony, which was attended by about 100 relatives and friends. The bride's table was decorated with a lace cloth, centered with an arrangement of pink and white gladioluses. Mrs. Lloyd Nyseth, sister of the bridegroom, served the wedding cake, and Mrs. Don Andral of Salem presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. James Bacchus, Jr., of McMinnville was in charge of the guest book. During the reception, Stanley Warnock played a trombone solo, accompanied by Mrs. Ursel Hallsted, and Mr. Robert Clayville of Salem sang "Because" . . .

The young couple will make their home in Walla Walla, Wash., where the bridegroom will finish his senior year at Walla Walla college . . .

Wed August 22—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wickman (Jeanne Nordonne) were married August 22. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Nordonne and Mr. Wickman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Wickman. (Steimonts studio picture)

Peg in Washington

BY ALENE (PEG) PHILLIPS

Washington, D.C., Aug. 24. Dear Marian: This was Secretary Douglas McKay's first day at the office since his Oregon vacation and with a desk piled high with work, he was still signing mail when the rest of us left at 6:30. The McKays report a spectacular trip home from San Francisco where the Secretary spoke Friday noon before the Commonwealth club of California. The airplane trip was over the Grand Canyon area and since the day was clear, the view of the colorful panorama below was one of the most magnificent that they had ever seen . . .

In San Francisco, the McKays visited with Colonel and Mrs. T. E. May, who drove from their home in Carmel for the visit in the city with their long time friends, The Mays formerly lived in Salem when the Colonel was a senior instructor with the Oregon National Guard. A special get-together at the San Francisco Press club was an event of Thursday evening enjoyed by the McKays following their late afternoon flight from Portland. On Friday evening a reception and dinner party at the Family Club honored the secretary. A group of local business leaders arranged the affair . . .

Members of the President's cabinet are usually thought of as the heads of the departments of the executive branch of the government who deal exclusively with all phases of American life on a national and international basis. This is substantially true, but the Secretary of the Interior is drawn close to the community life in the nation's capital through his administration of the beautiful parks of the city which are a part of the department's national park system. If this justifies the additional title "City Park Commissioner" to the list of public offices held by Secretary McKay, the job has the distinction of having national status, since Washington, D.C. and its parks belong to all of the people of the country and are visited by a large cross-section of Americans each year . . .

The national capital park system had its origin under a Congressional act of July 16, 1790, establishing the seat of the federal government in the District of Columbia. The original L'Enfant plan for the orderly development of the city included a park system of 30 actual and potential reservations, which now has grown to 787 units located in Maryland, Virginia and the District, totalling 35,595 acres . . .

The year-round staff of 884 employees, augmented in the summer by a force of 300 men, is engaged in the development, administration, and maintenance of the park system. It is estimated that 60 million park patrons, occupied with some type of active or passive recreation, use and re-use the parks each year. Some picnic areas within the District are favorite spots for families on the summer evenings as little travel is involved to reach Rock Creek, West Potomac, East Potomac, Anacostia and Fort Dupont Parks. Some of the smaller parks, occupying only a square block through the close-in area, provide benches much sought by nearby hotel and apartment dwellers for warm weather relief. Baseball diamonds, tennis courts, softball fields, volley ball and horseshoe courts, golf courses, swimming areas, bicycle-pedaled paddle boats and canoes, afford more active recreational features in the capital parks. For example, there are five 18-hole golf courses and golfers claim them to be among the best public courses in the country . . .

While the weightiest problems confronting the Secretary of the Interior do not arise in connection with the administration of the parks in Washington, it is an important adjunct of the department as the capital park system offers

Woodburn Duo Wed

Woodburn—Miss Patricia Withers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Withers of Woodburn, and Byron Stephenson were married Friday night, August 21, at the First Methodist church in Salem, with the Rev. Brooks Moore officiating. Mr. Stephenson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Stephenson of La Crosse, Wash. . . .

A Christmas wedding had been planned but due to the fact that Mr. Stephenson has accepted a position with KFBB, radio and television station in Great Falls, Mont., and is to take over his duties August 31, the couple decided to be married immediately. They will leave for Montana Friday, August 28, where they will make their home . . .

Club Votes Scholarship

Twenty-four members of the Salem Business and Professional Women's club met for a no-host supper at the home of Miss Mabel Savage on Garden Road, Tuesday, with Mrs. Ben Ramseyer co-hostess, assisted by Mrs. L. E. Hobbs and Mrs. Don Ringle of the club hospitality committee . . .

An interesting talk, based on research about the pioneer women in business and industry, was given by Miss Merl Dimick. In line with this subject, Miss Dimick stressed the importance of preserving more of Salem's oldest residences . . .

It was decided at Tuesday's meeting to set aside $100 to be used as a scholarship, the recipient to be designated at a later date . . .

Announcement was also made that a Korean student has been selected to receive the Oriental scholarship to Oregon State college given each year by the Oregon Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs . . .

Miss Betty Elofson and Miss Eleanor Roberts of the Salem club are attending the regional conference of Business and Professional Women's clubs at Salt Lake City, August 26 through 31 . . .

The date of the annual observance of Business Women's Week is to be October 11-17. The Salem club will be in charge of the Chamber of Commerce luncheon on October 8 . . .

Flower Arrangements Feature Garden Party

A flower arrangements display is to be a feature of the benefit garden party for which members of St. Mary's guild, St. Paul's Episcopal church, will entertain on Sunday at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Watts on Wallace road . . .

Ten or more arrangements will be in the display. Mrs. Kenneth Muller is chairman for the display . . .

All members and friends of the church are invited to the party to be given between 3 and 5 o'clock. All proceeds go to the new church building now under construction on South High . . .
