A Gay Homemade Cloth Is Easy on the Budget

(AP News Features)

The buffet dinner has emerged as the most popular form of entertaining in today's servantries households — and the gayer the table setting the better.

Many apartment-dwellers set out food and appointments on the living room table — since there is no dining room — and let guests help themselves. Since many such tables are of the long, narrow variety not adaptable to the average tablecloth, the clever homemaker will stitch up a gay, informal cloth in suitable measurements.

Sanforized solid colored denim teamed with bright plaid denim as shown here is a good fabric selection for this type cloth. Trick it out with napkin holders that also serve as space savers when stitched to sides of tablecloth.

This particular cloth will fit a table 36"x45" with graceful hangover on all sides. If your particular table has a slightly different measurements, adjust sections of fabric accordingly. Incidentally, this same cloth will see double duty in warm weather when used for narrow outdoor dinner tables.

Albert Evans Returns Home

Portland, Ore.—Albert T. Evans, Jr., 23-year-old Portland youth missing since Sunday, walked to safety late last night. Evans, who had been the object of a four-state search since he failed to return from a fishing trip Sunday, walked into Skiway lodge near Government Camp about 8 p.m. Reports said he apparently suffered no serious ill effects from his two days and nights in the mountains.

The youth, who returned to his home and wife last night, left his home Sunday to go fishing on the Clackamas river.

But he said instead he went to fish White river on the south-east slope of Mt. Hood.

He said he got about 10 miles off the Wapanita cutoff when the car "started acting up" and he pulled off the road and went fishing. Later he discovered it had become bogged down and first gear also went out.

He slept in the car Sunday and Monday nights and then began a 35-mile trek to the lodge.

Evans said he was mainly "hungry and tired." He had not eaten since Monday.

Meanwhile, a small search party continued the hunt for Ralph Day, missing since a week ago Sunday southwest of Mt. Hood. The party reported late yesterday that still no trace of Day had been found.

SHADES OF DON QUIXOTE!

Party promoter Elsa Maxwell gets a welcoming kiss from her host, Marquis de Cuevas, during a rehearsal for big shindig near Biarritz, in Southern France. Miss Maxwell portrays the role of Sancho Panza, donkey-riding companion of Don Quixote in the Spanish classic. The Chilean-born Marquis de Cuevas will entertain the international set in an 18th Century-theme party which will cost an estimated $65,000. The 2,000 to 3,000 guest range from rubbernecks to royalty. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Paris)

Attendance Falls Down At 18th Century Ball

Biarritz, France (AP) — About 1,000 guests—a few famous, most of the rest attracted by the possibility of rubbing elbows with a long list of notables who were invited but didn't appear—turned out Tuesday night for the Marquis de Cuevas' big 18th Century ball.

The turnout at the Chiberta Country Club was about half what had been expected. Those present had no trouble finding elbow room.

Most of them wandered homeward about 1 a.m. right after the spectacular ballet performance on a specially constructed stage. But the champagne and rum punch flowed until about 4 a.m.

The host, stilled in a gold and satin Louis XIV costume with a towering feather headdress received guests from a throne. He was reported to have collapsed from the excitement about 3 a.m.

The towns along the Basque coast of France—the Atlantic region near the Spanish border—helped to put up the money for the big affair. The idea was to attract attention to the region as a vacation spot.

Among the guests was movie actress Merle Oberon, who was garbed in a simple white robe and said she was "Titania." She was accompanied by Prince Ruspoli, with a monkey's mask on his face. He played the part of her servant.

Elsa Maxwell, in satin breeches, rode a recalcitrant donkey into the grounds, and had the announcer stuttering while the donkey refused to budge with his heavy burden. Renee Jeanmaire, a ballet dancer, came in on the neck of a camel, tired from a circus touring the area.

CIO Woodworkers Vote Against Strike

BEND (AP)—There were reports here Wednesday that CIO Woodworkers, who held a stop-work meeting at the Brooks-Scanlon mill Monday, had voted against a strike.

The company had turned down a union request for a 5-cent hourly wage increase, saying it could not afford the extra expense at this time.

The workers were at their jobs Tuesday.
