A number of children from the Salem community needed medical attention over the week-end for an assortment of minor accidents.

The most serious accident occurred to four-year-old David Radcliff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Radcliff, 1477 Morton street, who fell from his parent's car Sunday evening while they were on their way to Salem from Albany.

The parents said they were going about 45 miles an hour when David apparently fell against the door handle and plunged from the car when the door opened. He suffered severe cuts and some loss of flesh on the forehead. He was kept overnight at Salem Memorial hospital after treatment and his condition was reported as satisfactory Monday.

Fatal Fall on Mt. St. Helens

Longview, Wash. (UP)—Sixteen-year-old Ted Sageser of Portland, Ore., died of injuries suffered when he fell into a crevasse at the 7,000 level on Mt. St. Helens yesterday afternoon.

Sageser was a member of a party of Hinson Memorial church young people on a holiday outing on Mt. St. Helens. The group's leader, Dr. Raymond Roy, Portland, said the accident occurred about 3 p. m. yesterday when Sageser lost his footing and tumbled into the 30-foot deep crevasse. Another member of the party, John Knowles of Portland, also slipped but Roy said he pulled the boy to safety from the lip of the crevasse.

Sageser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Sageser, were at the timberline on the peak when their son's body was brought down the mountain.

Logger and Snake Cause Silverton Stir Sunday

Silverton — One man and a snake six and a half feet long had this town screaming and taking cover Sunday.

This was followed by fisticuffs. Then the man was arrested and booked for disorderly conduct and the snake was shot by a policeman. The man, Walter Kenfield, 24, a logger, was committed to the Marion county jail in Salem by Justice of the Peace Alf O. Nelson. He later made $100 bail and was released. He gave his address as Winston, but said he used to live in Silverton.

It all started when Kenfield showed up on the street with a big snake wrapped around his arm. That might have been all right had he not thrust the snake's head at children to make them scream and run. His field day of amusement ended when he did the same thing to Mrs. Hobart Tellefsen at the Silverton Recreation Hall, which got Mr. Tellefsen and police into the picture.

Kenfield first went to a doughnut shop and got breakfast, with the big snake on his arm. He wasn't exactly welcome, but no one said anything. At the Recreation Hall he allegedly thrust the snake's head at Mrs. Tellefsen, and the snake's forked tongue brushed her cheek.

Tellefsen snatched Kenfield and Mrs. Tellefsen called the police. Chief "Buck" Main, who admits he's afraid of snakes, nevertheless took drastic action against Kenfield, who still clung to the snake. A police car, driven by Officer Martin Kassebaum, was called and Kenfield was taken to see the judge. Kassebaum later shot the snake.

It was a bullsnake, measuring 6 1/2 feet, and Kenfield said he found it in the brush near town.
