

Some Notations . . .

By M. L. F.

It's State Fair Week, and that's the big news for the capital this week.

There are many of those who go because they just would not miss it—it is a big annual occasion and to go is a yearly ritual; there are those who go because they feel it is a duty; there are those who go because they feel they have to for business connections or duties connected with the displays; and there is a great big group, thank goodness, who go because they find it fun and interesting.

As we have stated in previous years a good place to start from in your rounds over the grounds is from the Kiddieland area . . . Once you stop there or walk slowly along the walk and watch the pre-school group riding the little train, riding the ponies, or the little automobiles . . . and other midget gadgets for their entertainment, you've got the proper spirit and enthusiasm for the fun of State Fair . . . You can't observe the wide-eyed little faces, the rapt expressions and the broad grins without catching some of the spirit of delight and wonder and awe that sends you on your way to really enjoy the Fair . . .

And about twilight time, take in the Floral Department Display, in the northwest section, decidedly the most distinctive and unusual display on the grounds this year . . . It is beautiful any time of day, but especially so just about the time the lights come on . . . Whoever put over the idea to have the floral and horticultural display outside on the grounds this year, is a genius, an idea without limits as future fairs come along after this successful start . . . It is an especially restful and attractive place to go after making the rounds through the milling crowds elsewhere on the fair grounds . . .

And, of course, one ends a trip to the Fair with the Night Revue—one of the best shows ever, worth twice its price . . . It's pretty much a Hawaiian show—every ripple, shiver and quiver that go with Hawaiian music and dance are there, along with costumes in bright and exotic colors and Hawaiian seashore background; but there are several top-notch vaudeville acts in addition to give proper balance to Hawaiian music and dancing . . .

There's Eve and Joe Black, acrobats, in about the best contortion act you'll ever see; there are the Arnauts, French comedians—if the job and time permitted we could go every night to take in their zany bird act, "Birds in Love," it's a riot; there is the really sensational balancing act of the Amin Brothers; and an equally sensational tight-rope act by Hubert Castle . . . The enthusiastic reception of the opening night crowd should assure a packed grandstand every night . . .

Among those at the revue Saturday night, Governor and Mrs. Paul L. Patterson, and with them in their box, State Representative and Mrs. Lee Ohmart of Salem . . . Climax to the Saturday night revue was the presentation of pink

Autumn Colors Featured At Wiper-Moll Ceremony

A Sunday evening wedding of interest to many friends took place in the First Congregational church when Miss Patricia Alice Moll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clyde Boyle, Sr. of Hood Canal, Wash., was married to Robert Ellis Wiper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle E. Wiper.

Dr. Brooks Moore of the First Methodist church read the vows for the couple at 5 o'clock. A bank of deep apricot gladioluses centered with chrysanthemums in fall shades decorated the front of the church. Flowers were at the pews during the processional aisle. Mrs. Karl Schmidt and Malcolm Campbell sang solos, also a duet, Mr. Campbell singing the Lord's Prayer while the couple knelt at the altar. Alice Rose Jones was organist.

In Fall Shades Lighting the candles were Misses Marlene Bayless and Vivian Chance, both wearing ankle length frocks in toast brown shade.

Five attendants preceded the bride down the processional aisle, wearing dresses in autumn shades. Mrs. Kenneth H. Lund, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Her ankle length frock was of bitter-sweet taffeta with overskirt of pale rust net, a stole of the net terminating in a bow at the front. Her flowers were a crescent of gladioluses in fall shades.

The bridesmaids wore dresses styled identically to that worn by the honor attendant, but in different shades. Miss Janice Lee Boyle, sister of the bride, was in light brown, Miss Wilene Wiper, sister of the bridegroom, in light gold, Mrs. Richard Cole, in pale yellow, all the dresses having pale rust net overskirts and matching stoles. All carried crescents of gladioluses.

Miss Bonita Boyle, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid, wearing a dress identical to the others, but in eggshell taffeta with overskirt and stole of pale rust tulle. Her flowers also were a crescent of gladioluses.

Blush Pearl Satin The bride, given in marriage by Mr. Boyle, wore a beautiful dress of blush pearl satin with Chantilly lace panel down the front. It was designed with long sleeves and court train that also was trimmed with the Chantilly lace. A Juliet cap of the lace, embroidered with seed pearls and styled with a net ruffle framing the face, held in place the fingertip illusion veil. David Turnbull was best man. Charles Robins, Donald Straubach, Karl Schmidt, Richard Cole, Robert Seamster, Charles Martin and Wesley Heeden were the ushers.
