BUSINESS MAN OF THE WEEK

They say if you want to get something done, put the busiest man in town to work on it. A fellow like John J. Lahley, for instance. John is the very capable breadwinner for his family of four, being a distributor for Marckx Bakery. He's a councilman at Amity, and also president of the Yamhill-Polk country fire association. He is married to the former Opal Richter of Amity, Oregon, and they have two children. He was formerly with the Nestle company, manufacturers of the famous coffee and chocolate products bearing that name.

As a Marckx Bakery representative, he's now his own boss in his own independent business. He delivers Marckx Bakery products to Salem area homes in his own truck, does all his own buying and keeps his own books. ## Railroad Car Shortage Acute

Portland (AP) — The Western Forest Industries Association reported Saturday that the shortage of railroad cars had become acute in Western Oregon.

Mills in the Eugene area are getting only from one half to less than one third of the cars they need, P. T. Titus, executive vice president of the association, said.

Earlier the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation had asked the Southern Pacific Railroad for more cars for harvesting crops.

Southern Pacific officials said the usual harvest time shortage and the lessening of shipments to Korea were responsible. The reduction of shipments to the Far East means fewer empty cars are available on the West Coast.
