Year Opens Next Week At College

By ALICE LEHMAN

(Capital Journal Correspondent) Oregon State College, Corvallis—Here it is, time again for school and college days. Beaverville is all abuzz while rolling out its welcome mat for new freshmen. Yes, they will be the first back to the campus except for the special groups who will be there to meet them.

Talons and Thanes, women's and men's sophomore service honoraries, will be there in their white uniforms to greet newcomers. Another larger group known as the Rook and Rookess counsellors will help Freshmen find their way around, too. You may identify this group by the felt letter "R" on their blouses and shirts.

New student week starts this Sunday, September 13. The first meeting of the freshman class, or class of '57, will be in the form of a convocation to be that evening in the coliseum. Freshmen start Monday morning with English placement exams and other placement tests. The freshman pledge convocation will be Thursday evening. The rest of the week will be spent in school meetings and conferences with advisers to plan fall term schedules. All is not work, though, because evenings can be spent in various ways. One fun-packed party freshmen won't want to miss is the "Freshman Mix" where they can enjoy "picking up paw paws." This event will be held on Coleman field.

For new and old alike, registration for classes will begin Friday, September 18. Seniors will have first chance when the doors to the coliseum open at 8 a.m. Registration will be completed on Saturday and classes will start the following Monday, September 21.

Now for a glimpse at the social side. Football will be the main topic when we reach the campus. We're hoping to have a good team this year. Two Salemites, Jim Rock and Bill Johnson, will be in the Orange and Black jerseys fighting for OSC when pigskin time rolls around.

Rushing will be another big subject. Men's rushing will be during New Student Week, starting September 13. Women's rushing this year will not start until September 27 and will begin with an open house that day. Parties will continue through the week and pledging will be the following Sunday. See you soon on the campus.
