Car Shortage Hits Shippers

A freight car shortage and glutted warehouses are hampering grain and seed crop shipments in the Willamette valley, George Dewey, executive officer of the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation, said today.

Dewey said farmers at Silverton and Pratum were unable to get their grain in warehouses the start of this week and added that Buchanan-Cellers warehouse at Canby was full and would be unable to accept more deliveries.

Grain storages in Marion county alone need 165 cars the rest of this month to handle shipments to terminal markets and they reported they were increasing their use of trucks to clear out more warehouse space.

The Oregon Public Utilities Commission reported it was canvassing the car supply situation at other valley points. Dewey said all the warehouses in trouble are on the Southern Pacific line and officials of that road in San Francisco have promised their cooperation.

Supposed Oregon POW Among Those Not Freed

A dozen or more Oregon families, faced with tragic disappointment at end of the exchange of Korean War prisoners, have their hopes pinned now on U. N. protests that some prisoners were held back by the Communists.

There is available no accurate list of missing Oregon men whose families have had some reason to hope they were prisoners. The list prepared by the adjutant general's office had only a handful of names. Some whose names were not listed there or in any previous news story, were among the 31 Oregonians freed in the month-long "Operation Big Switch" completed Saturday night.

But from one source and another, some perhaps no more than the faint hopes of families, an unofficial list was compiled by the Associated Press before the prisoner exchange began. A dozen names on that list were not mentioned as released.

There are six other Oregon men listed by the Communists as having died while prisoners. And there are two others also reported dead, one by a returning POW and one by the Red Cross.

Among the dozen thought prisoners and still missing, the evidence that they actually were captured was, in most cases, not positive. But their relatives hoped and believed they were.

But when the prisoner exchange was completed, these men with their next of kin also listed, had not been named: 1st Lt. Rayman G. Heiple, Molalla; Rayman G. Heiple, Molalla.

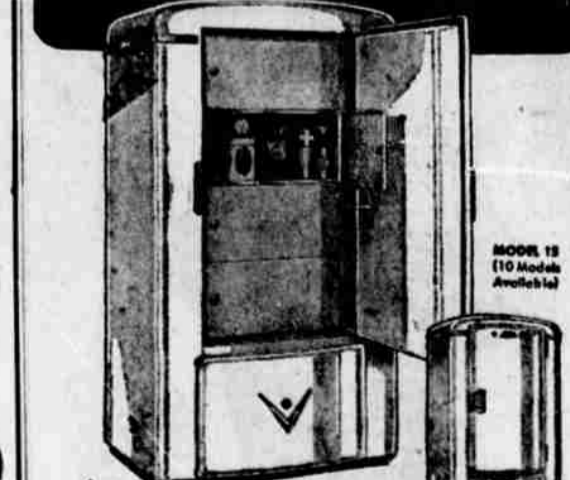

Ensign Randolph T. Scoggan, Dayton; Leslie W. Scoggan, Rt. 1, Dayton.

Cpl. Louis D. Fox, Jr., Dallas; Sgt. Wilfred E. Woods, Lebanon.

Pope Appeals to Youth of World

Vatican City (AP)—Pope Pius XII urged Catholic youth throughout the world Wednesday to fight for Christ and the church in a "world that is so inhuman because it is so anti-Christian."

The Pope spoke to diocesan assistants of Youths of Catholic Action in Italy. But his words, given in a special audience were meant for "all Catholic forces" and especially for youth.

The pontiff warned youth against the dangers of the modern world, which, he said, "deafens youths with its clamor and tires them with its constant restlessness."
