Schmidt Home Damaged by Fire

A hot chimney stack started sawdust burning and the flames made their way through an air duct into the living room of the home of John J. Schmidt, 410 South 24th street, Tuesday afternoon, badly damaging a bed and a sofa before firemen extinguished the blaze.

Most of the fire was confined to the sawdust bin in the basement, however, firemen said, and damage was minor. There was also some damage from smoke.

The smoke stack from which the blaze started led from the sawdust furnace to the chimney. It was coated with asbestos but was too close to the sawdust bin and the covering was not enough to prevent the fire, firemen said.

Seek U. S. Bases In Pakistan

London (AP)—Pakistan and British informants said Wednesday the United States is negotiating with Pakistan for permission to establish military bases on the Asian subcontinent in exchange for defense aid.

The informants said that the agreement if concluded would set up American forces on both western and eastern segments of Pakistan which are separated by more than 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

In Washington, officials told reporters the defense of the Middle East is getting top level consideration but no negotiations are actually under way with Pakistan. However, the White House announced the governor-general of Pakistan, Ghulam Mohammed, will be a luncheon guest of President Eisenhower Thursday. Several members of the President's cabinet, including Secretary of Defense Wilson, also will attend.

Europe Ignores Armistice Day

London (AP)—The 35th anniversary of the armistice which ended World War I passed almost unnoticed Wednesday in Europe concerned about a possible World War III. U. S. forces stationed in Britain, West Germany, Berlin, Austria and Italy took an official holiday.

Only France held public ceremonies remembering the 1,337,000 Frenchmen who died in the first world war.

Premier Joseph Laniel, speaking at Compiègne, urged French people to show that while the country might lack political stability there is stability "in the continuity of the national ideal."

Compiègne, at the edge of the forest of the same name 45 miles northeast of Paris, is where the armistice was signed ending World War I. It is also where Hitler forced France to sign an armistice June 22, 1940, in World War II.

U.N. Agrees to

Guatemala, left-wing Central American republic, was the other abstainer. Only the Soviet bloc voted against taking up the charges.

Lodge gave four reasons why he felt the Assembly should take up the charges:

1. The acts were committed against troops battling aggressors as so defined by the U.N.
2. They were committed against forces sent to Korea by the U.N.
3. These acts, which he called mass murder, violate principles of common humanity and decency which the U.N. is sworn to uphold.
4. The forces which committed these acts "still stand today, fully mobilized and fully armed. . . . This story of inhuman warfare is not brought out of a forgotten past but bears directly on the pressing problems of the present."

Wreaths Placed
Prior to the colonel's speech wreaths from various auxiliaries were placed by school children and introduced were the four marshalls of the day, Frank Millett, Robin Day, Harvey Shaffer and William Cozad; Mayor Al Loucks, Police Chief Clyde Warren, Fire Chief E. Musical numbers were by a massed band directed by Maurice Brennen. Company D, 162nd infantry regiment took part in the flag raising ceremony and the firing squad was from Company B, 162nd infantry regiment. Both are National Guard units. Dave Hoss was master of ceremonies for the program and introduced the speaker.

Obligation

McKenney told of this country's means of keeping a strong defense—the reserve forces or citizen soldier. After tracing the development of the reserves he paid high tribute to these people saying:

"In World War II the national guard was ready. A well-trained major element of our defense. Again these men gave up their civil pursuits and took up their patriotic duty. The reserves, too, often came in as fillers.

"These national guard and organized reserves were the men who had spent long and tiring periods of instruction when others had said, 'there will be no more war'."

Listing the various branches of the reserves, the speaker said, "The citizens in these reserves are proud of our bulwark," and at the same time reminded those present that they, too, could have a place in the defense by helping with civil defense.

In closing, Col. McKenney described Armistice Day as a day of reflection to remember those who had died to give continued freedom, and recalled the unknown soldier buried in Arlington cemetery to represent the many of all wars who had given their lives for freedom. He then said:

"Armistice Day is a day of rejoicing that hostilities are over, that there will be no more bloodshed; a day of opportunity to ponder and take stock of the opportunity to preserve the heritage passed down from our earliest days as a nation and maintained by those who defended the nation in past wars.

"And now we have the obligation to hold the fort and carry the torch onward. Let us realize our obligations, fulfill them and protect our heritage."

Salem Driver Flees Police

Portland (AP)—A stolen car being chased at high speed by a state patrolman sideswiped a car then crashed into a guard-rail post on the superhighway under the east end of the Ross Island bridge early Wednesday.

The driver fled but was caught by city police and booked as Jack McReed Nelson, 27, Salem. He suffered minor cuts in the crash.

The car had been stolen here, State Patrolman Bruce Schroeder, who made the chase, said a car stolen earlier at Salem had been abandoned at Milwaukee.

City police identified the car stolen here as that of Thomas W. Smith, 660 Hawthorne street. Word received here from Milwaukee police was that a Milwaukee officer noticed the car there with an unidentified man in it.

The man said the car was stalled and that he was trying to catch a bus. The officer directed the man to a bus stop and resumed his patrol when he heard the broadcast description of the stolen Salem car.

Salem police said they have no record on Nelson but it was reported to them that he has served time in the Washington state penitentiary. State police here said they had no mention on Nelson.

County Fair

However, a minority group favors the proposal and it is likely that this opposition will be sparked by Rep. Leon Davis of Washington county, who voted for House Joint resolution No. 9 in the 1952 legislature. This resolution, which was defeated after a lengthy debate, proposed for study and classification of beneficiaries of the pari-mutual funds as well as financial assistance to legitimate organizations from the legislature.

It was a companion measure to House Bill 24, introduced by Rep. Joe Harvey, transferring all pari-mutual receipts to the general fund, a bill that never reached the house floor for a vote.

Under the present distribution fund the Oregon state fair and the Pacific International Livestock show receive $35,000 each, and various other agricultural shows are given varying amounts. Each county fair last year received $12,800 and it is estimated that the allocation for the present year will be approximately $10,500.

Rep. Davis, former president of the fair's association and formerly a director in the announced what position he was expected to take in the controversy, but his majority views is based on the majority action.

The fair managers were welcomed to Salem by Mayor Al Loucks and Russell Pratt, president of the Salem Chamber of Commerce.

Rep. Mark Hatfield of Salem, who was chairman of the house federal and state affairs committee, and whose committee led an unsuccessful effort to transfer the pari-mutual funds to the general fund, was the principal speaker at the Thursday afternoon session.

The parade was led by city police followed by the four parade marshalls, Frank Millett, Robin Day, Harvey Shaffer and William Cozad and other dignitaries in open cars. The reviewing party of Mayor Al Loucks, Police Chief Clyde Warren, Fire Chief Elsworth L. Smith and President Russel E. Pratt of the Salem Chamber of Commerce rode in the parade to the reviewing stand near the new courthouse building.

The parade ended at the Capitol building where special ceremonies honored the dead of the two World Wars and the Korean conflict, and Col. Alfred E. McKenney gave the address.

Crutch Fence Bars Dog From Hoss' Garden

Gene B. Hoss, who lives at 3325 Liberty Road likes to have a good garden. But an obstacle to this was the dog population in that rural community on the fringe of Salem.

Being an imaginative man, Hoss got an idea for a dog-proof fence. He knew that Oregon State hospital has hundreds of discarded crutches used by the halt and the maimed for many past years.

Why not a fence made of crutches, thought Hoss, placed close enough together that the dogs couldn't get through? So he propositioned the hospital authorities and bought 200 of them, which now form a fence 140 feet long on one side of the garden.

The dogs don't worry him anymore.

Voices Faith in

Asked by a reporter whether he felt Truman would knowingly have appointed a communist spy to office, Eisenhower replied with a crisp no—that such a thing was inconceivable to him.

2. Eisenhower would not have subpoenaed Truman, as the House Un-American Activities Committee has done, and probably would not have similarly summoned Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark who was Truman's attorney general in 1946. The President said that those were his personal views and that he was not telling Congress how to run its business.

Truman Undecided
Truman, in New York, said he was "not in a position to answer now" whether he would heed the committee summons.

Truman declined comment on the President's assertion.

But in Columbia, South Carolina, Governor James F. Byrnes, who was Truman's secretary of state, refused to comply with a similar summons that he testify before the House committee.

Byrnes, subpoenaed Tuesday night, telegraphed the committee "as chief executive of South

Over 300 at Helser Dinner

Salem clients and prospective clients of J. Henry Helser & company, to the number of 350 or so gathered at the Senator Hotel Tuesday night and heard a prediction that 1954 will be a prosperous year, but warnings that freedom-loving Americans must be on the alert against aggressors that would rob them of their freedom.

The dinner event brought out the biggest crowd ever assembled in the Capitol room of the Senator, with an overflow that filled the nearby Camellia room which was reached by speech amplifiers.

Dr. Neal Bowman, who was introduced as traveler, author, lecturer, and public relations director for the National Association of Manufacturers, was the main speaker.

C. W. Helser, father of J. Henry Helser, spoke on "The United Nations and What It Means to the World."

J. Henry Helser, who made the closing speech predicted no depression in 1954, and

Carolina I cannot, by appearing, in response to this summons, admit your right to command a governor to take his state and remain in the city of Washington until granted leave by your committee to return."

Byrnes Refuses
Eisenhower said he was not going to prejudice anyone's case but that neither was he going to be a party to rank injustice to anyone. He said that while the nation must exercise eternal vigilance against communism it must avoid any un-American effort to accuse anyone unjustly.

Shortly after Eisenhower's news conference, Brownell arrived in Washington from a trip to New York. He told reporters who met him at the airport that he was not going to answer any questions about the White case.

If he had anything to say after conferring with associates at his office, Brownell added, he would let reporters know.

Marine Corps League Holds Anniversary

Members of the Marine Corps Tuesday night observed the 178th anniversary of the U.S. Marine Corps with a dinner at Shattuck.

Special feature of the event, attended by about 85 persons, was the cutting of the Marine Corps birthday cake by Lt. Col. Leonard Hicks, who commanded Salem's first Marine Corps reserve unit; Maj. Cecil Gardner, commander of the present reserve unit, and Capt. Hubert L. Faltyn, supply officer of the unit.

In addition to the members of the reserve unit, their wives and guests and the Marine Corps league members those in attendance included the inspector-instructor staff for the Marine Corps Reserves; Lt. Col. George Bunn, instructor-instructor for the Naval Reserve surface division; and Lt. Col. James Thornton, officer in charge of the Salem Naval Air Facility.

It is estimated that more than 40 billion gallons of gasoline were consumed in the United States in 1952.
